Donald Briggs, 1983 All governments require popular support and in democracies this support must be maintained by noncoercive means This book analyzes the question of political support in Canada a country in which the maintenance of the integrity of the political community has been and continues to be in the words of the editors the single most salient aspect of the country's political life The nature of popular support is first considered in broad theoretical terms then from the standpoint of those agents most responsible for maintaining support in Canadian democracy then as influenced by particular issues and policies and finally as it affects and is affected by the separatist movement in Quebec Protecting Canadian Democracy Canadian Centre for Management

The Logic of Multiparty Systems M.J. Holler, 2012-12-06 What determines the number of political parties in a democracy Electoral rules certainly influence the incentives to create and maintain parties However a society's political culture can maintain parties despite electoral rules that give them poor prospects of success Thus comparing the number of parties and differences in electoral rules across countries cannot clearly test the effect of the electoral rules A better test would examine a society with a fairly continuous political culture but a change in electoral rules Postwar France is such a society While the basic social order has not changed there was a drastic change in the electoral system in 1958 which theory implies would reduce the number of parties Thus we can test the hypothesis that the number of parties fell with the change in electoral system We can also calculate an equivalent number of parties to see how closely France approached a two party system under the new regime The first section describes the electoral rules under the Fourth and Fifth Republics The second section develops a model that indicates how the change in electoral rules should have affected the incentives for multiple parties The third section tests the hypothesis that the number of parties fell from the Fourth to the Fifth Republic
