Board of Survey of Canals and Inland Waterways, 1955 Report of the Proceedings of the Conference on Inland Navigation, Birmingham, February 12th, 1895 M. Walton Brown, 2015-07-21 Excerpt from Report of the Proceedings of the Conference on Inland Navigation Birmingham February 12th 1895 With Map of English Canals The President said that the members were about to consider several papers on canals written by gentlemen specially competent to deal with the subject Probably some of the members might not have much technical knowledge concerning canals but it did not require such knowledge to be able to appreciate the great importance of all means of transport to an industry such as the mining industry of this country which produced 200 000 000 tons of minerals annually cheap and efficient means of transport were to it of vital importance The question of cheap transport assumed additional importance in times of depressed trade and the South Staffordshire coal field was served by canals to a greater extent than most others so that both the time and place of this meeting seemed specially appropriate for the consideration of these papers The inland navigations of this country appeared from various causes to have been greatly neglected since the advent of railways and in this respect we were said to lag behind many European nations and the United States of America Various reasons were assigned for the present inefficiency of inland waterways one of which was the effect of railway control over a considerable portion of them and in so far as it eliminated competition this seemed to be a natural consequence of such control Another cause was the want of uniformity of gauge in the construction of canals which must be fatal to the efficiency of the system as a whole The adoption of some form of mechanical haulage also seemed essential to the complete efficiency of transport by canals About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
