

Creating Compositions

What Shape?

Does the shape you have chosen make connections to the artist(s) you have looked at in your sketchbook?

What Size?

Annotate your compositions to show size you are planning. If you plan to work large make sure you try a small section on a large scale first. If you work slowly, working small may be best and equally successful. What scale does the artist(s) you have looked at use?

A Series?

A series can be really striking. Make sure you have enough time to finish what you have planned. If you choose to create a series make sure each section works on its own and with the other sections.

Annotation of Compositions

Annotation should add something extra to what a viewer can see, for example the size. It should not state what you can see e.g. This is a picture of an apple. Your annotation should explain the following:

- what media you are using,
- what is going to happen in the background,
- which compositions you like and why,
- which compositions you feel are less successful and why,
- The size you are going to produce the work,
- links to your artists work.
