Constructions Of Power And Piety In Medieval Aleppo:

Constructions of Power and Piety in Medieval Aleppo Yasser Tabbaa, 2010-11-01 Tabbaa argues that the intense palatial and religious architectural activity of the period was intended to create a royal image of the Ayyubid state while also fostering links between it and the urban population. His study is based on an entirely new evaluation of the architectural and epigraphic aspects of the standing monuments of the period. It presents for the first time full photographic coverage of these monuments as well as many new plans and other renderings and pays close attention to monumental inscriptions correcting and augmenting previous studies. The book utilizes the full panoply of the available literary sources including topographies, chronicles, travel accounts, and poetry.

The Medieval Mediterranean City Felicity Ratté, 2021-08-18 This book is a study of architecture and urban design across the Mediterranean Sea from the 12th to the 14th Century, a time when there was no single hegemonic power dominating the area. The focus of the study is four cities on the Italian peninsula and four in Syria and Egypt, illustrating the interconnectedness of the design and use of urban structures, streets, and open space. Each chapter offers an historical analysis of the buildings and spaces used for trade, education, political display, and public action. The work includes historical and social analyses of the mercantile, social, political, and educational cultures of the eight cities, highlighting similarities and differences between Christian and Islamic practices. Sixteen new maps drawn specifically for this book are based on the writings of medieval travelers.

Muslim Military Architecture in Greater Syria Hugh N. Kennedy, 2006 This book investigates the Muslim castles of greater Syria from c. 700 to c. 1700 from archaeological and historical perspectives.

Reconstruction as Violence in Assad's Syria Nasser Rabbat, Deen Sharp, 2025-08-19 A sustained critique of postwar reconstruction in Syria as a politically neutral process. In 2011, emboldened by the Arab Spring, the Syrians rose up against their government. The Syrian regime used violence to suppress the protests so that what began as pro-democracy protests eventually morphed into a civil war with heavy outside intervention. Today, the Assad regime has fallen, but large parts of the country lie in ruins, millions of Syrians are displaced, and the economy is in freefall. Reconstruction as Violence delves into the complex interplay of post-conflict reconstruction in Syria, challenging the traditionally held dichotomy between the end of violence and the commencement of rebuilding. The contributors to this volume—architects, urbanists, geographers, and historians—employ critical concepts such as urbicide, domicide, and civilian crisis architecture to argue against the conventional theoretical frameworks that support a neat separation of phases. They illustrate how reconstruction often extends the dynamics of conflict into the urban and social realms, suggesting that the built environment becomes a battleground for further violence. They emphasize the importance of acknowledging the historical, economic, societal, legal, and bureaucratic contexts that shape reconstruction efforts, arguing for initiatives that prioritize equity, inclusivity, and community participation. Reconstruction as Violence starkly underscores the authors' stance that to overlook any of these dimensions or to disengage from the reconstruction process altogether represents a political choice with potentially detrimental effects on
