Roche-Hawley,2024-03-15 Since the advent of Assyriology in the early nineteenth century it has been known that two distinct scripts were used in ancient Mesopotamian inscriptions and documents One usefully characterized as cursive was used for the ephemeral documents of daily life as well as on most library and archival texts The other was a deliberately archaizing script reserved for ceremonial use This ceremonial script of Babylonian origin contained both archaic and archaizing signs and was in productive use for over two millennia not only in Babylonia but occasionally also in Assyria and beyond Yet to date there has been no systematic study devoted specifically to this ceremonial script nor any published syllabary of the archaic and archaizing signs it employs This volume attempts to rectify this deficiency by providing a substantive introduction to Babylonian ceremonial script along with a history of its modern study and several case studies of how the script was actually used The introduction is supplemented by an edition of the paleographic lists of the second and first millennia BCE which contain pedagogical inventories of the archaic and archaizing cuneiform signs illustrating how the ceremonial script was taught learned and transmitted in scholarly contexts

Between Script and Scripture: Performance Criticism and Mark's Characterization of the Disciples Zach Preston Eberhart,2024-03-25 This volume reimagines the first century reception of the Gospel of Mark within a reconstructed yet hypothetical performance event In particular it considers the disciples character and characterization through the lens of performance criticism Questions concerning the characterization of the disciples have been relatively one sided in New Testament scholarship in favor of their negative characterization This project demonstrates why such assumptions need not be necessary when we re consider the oral aural milieu in which the Gospel of Mark was first composed and received by its earliest audiences
