Contemporary Topics in Medium Energy Physics K. Goeke, W.Y.P. Hwang, J. Speth, 2013-06-29 The primary objective of the book on Contemporary Topics in Medium Energy Physics is to help the reader in exploring important frontier research as of the year of 1992 in the area of medium energy physics The book is the result of the multi pronged efforts by the authors who were invited to speak at the Second German Chinese Symposium on Medium Energy Physics September 7 10 1992 Bochum Germany The premise of the meeting is to investigate primarily how quantum chromodynamics QCD the candidate theory of strong interactions manifests itself in high energy and nuclear physics This book is divided into four parts i field theoretic treatments in QCD ii effective chirally symmetric models and QCD iii electroweak physics in general and iv topological solutions The focus is more on exposition of new ideas rather than a comprehensive review of the current status concerning these subjects as of the year of 1992 As there are many distinctly different research areas in contemporary intermediate energy physics we could only choose a few topics of current interest especially those which are related directly or indirectly to the structural studies of the nucleon proton or neutron Fortunately there are in recent years merging trends in these studies There is a call for an alternative and more efficient method to handle problems related to strong interactions as described by QCD This is the focus of the papers included in Part I
