Whitson, 2021-12-16 This book is a result of a symposium at a recent annual meeting of the American Educational Research Association that explored foundational issues relative to situated cognition theory Its chapters contribute to discourse about repositioning situated cognition theory within the broader supporting disciplines and to resolving the problematics addressed within the book There is a cumulative vision to the book its theme is that the notion of the individual in situated cognition theory needs to be fundamentally reformulated No theoretical reconfiguration of the social world or of social practices can overcome an individual cast in the dualist tradition This reformulation probes the physiological psychoanalytic and semiotic constitution of persons Chapters authors cover a wide range of topics including transfer of training arguing that traditional cognitive psychology has found precious little evidence of people s ability to apply knowledge gained in one context to the problems encountered in another ecosocial systems a new object of inquiry for situated cognition theory in which the primary units of analysis are not things or people but processes and practices how linkages between discursive practices are manifested as semiotic chaining of signifiers for individuals engaged in everyday activities at home or at school how the ability to function in ways that are consistent with logic emerges not through reflective abstraction on actions but through an enhanced sense of agency as more responsible roles are adopted in daily life practices the mutual constitution of social and individual knowledge familiar terms and concepts normally available through linguistic labels are cultural models to be distinguished from the variegated and hidden mid level meanings that reflect their situated uses in social activity the material neurological substrate through which cultural models and mid level meanings emerge and how learning environments can be structured to take advantage of the perceptual underpinnings of cognition

The Social Context of Cognitive Development Mary Gauvain, 2001-01-01 Traditional approaches to cognitive development can tell us a great deal about the internal processes involved in learning Sociocultural perspectives on the other hand provide valuable insights into the influences on learning of relationship and cultural variables This volume provides a much needed bridge between these disparate bodies of research examining the specific processes through which children internalize the lessons learned in social contexts The book reviews current findings on four specific domains of cognitive development attention memory problem solving and planning The course of intellectual growth in each domain is described and social factors that support or constrain it are identified The focus throughout is on how family peer and community factors influence not only what a child learns but also how learning occurs Supporting her arguments with solid empirical data the author convincingly shows how attention to sociocultural factors can productively complement more traditional avenues of investigation Interactive Minds Paul B. Baltes,Ursula M. Staudinger,1996-04-26 Interactive Minds harnesses both research and theory from several disciplines to study cognitive development in the social context of the life course
