Working-Class Community in the Age of Affluence Stefan Ramsden, 2017-02-24 It has appeared to many commentators that the most fundamental change in what it is meant to be working class in twentieth century Britain came not as a result of war or of want but of prosperity Social investigators documented how the relative affluence of the 1950s and 1960s improved the material conditions of life for working class Britons whilst eroding their commitment to the shared life of traditional communities Utilising an oral history case study of sociability and identity in the Yorkshire town of Beverley between the end of the Second World War and the election of Margaret Thatcher's government Working Class Community in the Age of Affluence challenges this influential narrative An introductory essay outlines how sociologists and historians understood the complex social cultural and economic changes of the post war decades through the prism of affluence and traces how these changes came to be seen as deleterious to the traditional working class community The book then proceeds thematically exploring change across areas of social life including family neighbourhood workplace and associational life This book represents the first sustained historical analysis of change and continuity in working class community living during the age of affluence It suggests not only that older social practices persisted but also that new patterns of sociability could strengthen as much as undermine community Ultimately Working Class Community in the Age of Affluence asks us to rethink assumptions about the decline of local solidarities in this pivotal period and to recognise community as a key feature of working class life across the twentieth century

The Community Life of Older People in Ireland Carmel Gallagher, 2008 This book is a contemporary sociological account of the lives of older people in two different communities in Ireland one urban and one rural The book is based on primary research that examined the social and community participation of older people in Rathmore and Rathbeg using both ethnographic and survey approaches The data presented provides insights into the nature of a community in a rapidly changing society and into older people's contributions to that community It points to realms of activity that offer genuine meaning and value in older people's lives A model of connectedness is developed in the study that identifies key characteristics and processes involved in sociability and solidarity within neighbourhoods and communities A typology of ten relational patterns describes the different ways in which older adults may be connected within their communities The author proposes an explanatory framework for understanding the complex and varied connections between people in communities The book also demonstrates what older people in Ireland perceive as a good life
