Contextual Family Therapy Peter Goldenthal, 1993. This book illustrates the varied applications of Ivan Boszormenyi Nagy's model for helping individuals better negotiate relationships. It provides a unique and powerful integrative approach to the treatment of individuals, couples and families by addressing four dimensions simultaneously: individual and family history, individual psychological issues, family transactions and power issues, and issues related to fairness in relationships.

The Quick Theory Reference Guide Karin Jordan, 2007. Since the beginning of the concepts of family therapy, mental health professionals have known that the family, the system, is a powerful source of support for change or a powerful force for resistance to change. Some professionals work with individuals, some with families and some with groups. However, all work with the context of the systems: family, group, community, country, etc. Students, especially beginning students, are overwhelmed and confused at the variety of approaches to working with clients. Many programs introduce students to individual as well as systems concepts in the course of training. Students need assistance in learning this variety of theories. They need to be able to compare and contrast theories and techniques to determine when and where to utilise the best skills in order to facilitate client change. Dr Karin Jordan has compiled a comprehensive text that enables the students to discover each theory as it is presented in its purist form The text is accessible yet the content provides comprehensive knowledge of each theory Dr Jordan has brought together the master educators and clinicians in our fields to write about their particular expertise Handbook of LGBT-Affirmative Couple and Family Therapy Jerry J. Bigner, Joseph L. Wetchler, 2012-05-04 The editors and contributors of this comprehensive text provide a unique and important contribution to LGBT clinical literature Spanning 30 chapters they discuss the diverse and complex issues involved in LGBT couple and family therapy In almost 15 years this book provides the first in depth overview of the best practices for therapists and those in training who wish to work effectively with LGBT clients couples and families need to know and is only the second of its kind in the history of the field The clinical issues discussed include raising LGBT children coming out elderly LGBT issues sex therapy ethical and training issues Because of the breadth of the book its specificity and the expertise of the contributing authors and editors it is the definitive handbook on LGBT couple and family therapy Treating Complex Trauma Mary Jo Barrett, Linda Stone Fish, 2014-05-30 In Treating Complex Trauma renowned clinicians Mary Jo Barrett and Linda Stone Fish present the Collaborative Change Model CCM a clinically evaluated model that facilitates client and practitioner collaboration and provides invaluable tools for clients struggling with the impact and effects of complex trauma A practical guide Treating Complex Trauma organizes clinical theory outcome research and decades of experiential wisdom into a manageable blueprint for treatment With an emphasis on relationships the model helps clients move from survival mindstates to engaged mindstates and as a sequential and organized model the CCM can be used by helping professionals in a wide array of disciplines and settings Utilization of the CCM in collaboration with clients and other trauma informed practitioners helps prevent the re traumatization of clients and the compassion fatigue of the practitioner so that they can work together to build a hopeful and meaningful vision of the future Resources in Education ,2001 Handbook of Psychology, Educational Psychology Irving B. Assessing Impairment Sam Goldstein, Jack A. Naglieri, 2009-06-15. Impairment and disability are widely used terms, yet considerable disagreement exists as to their relationship, especially when impairment means different things to different professionals in the fields of mental health, medicine, and education. Although diagnostic criteria for various disorders are clearly detailed in the DSM-IV and elsewhere, criteria for impairment remain elusive. And patients with severe limitations but minimal symptoms or the reverse further complicate the discussion. The first in-depth treatment of the theory, definition, and evaluation of this core concept, Assessing Impairment: From Theory to Practice, cuts through the confusion and cross-talk. Leading scholars and clinicians offer a robust evidence base for a much-needed reconceptualization of impairment within the context of diagnosis and disability, arguing for a wide-ranging quality-of-life perspective. This contextual approach to assessment goes beyond mere symptom counting, resulting in more accurate diagnosis, targeted interventions, and improved patient functioning. Within this concise but comprehensive volume, coverage focuses on key areas including: Current conceptualizations from the DSM-IV and other medical models; Methodologies for measuring symptom severity and impairment; Social-behavioral issues such as resilience, adaptive behaviors, and family environment; Developmental issues across the life span; Legal and ethical questions and civil rights issues; Impairment and disability as they relate to trauma. The interdisciplinary model proposed in Assessing Impairment gives clinicians vital tools for working with the unique limitations and strengths of every patient. Child, school, and educational psychologists will find it particularly useful given the critical importance of early detection and the complexity of young people's lives.
