Continuity And Change In Rural West Bengal:

Decentralization and Local Governance in Developing Countries Pranab Bardhan, Dilip Mookherjee, 2006-06-16

Over the past three decades the developing world has seen increasing devolution of political and economic power to local governments. Decentralization is considered an important element of participatory democracy and along with privatization and deregulation represents a substantial reduction in the authority of national governments over economic policy. The contributors to Decentralization and Local Governance in Developing Countries examine this institutional transformation from comparative and interdisciplinary perspectives offering detailed case studies of decentralization in eight countries: Bolivia, Brazil, China, India, Indonesia, Pakistan, South Africa, and Uganda. Some of these countries witnessed an unprecedented big bang shift toward comprehensive political and economic decentralization: Bolivia in 1995 and Indonesia after the fall of Suharto in 1998. Brazil and India decentralized in an uneven and more gradual manner. In some other countries such as Pakistan, devolution represented an instrument for consolidation of power of a nondemocratic national government. In China, local governments were granted much economic but little political power. South Africa made the transition from the undemocratic decentralization of apartheid to decentralization under a democratic constitution. The studies provide a comparative perspective on the political and economic context within which decentralization took place and how this shaped its design and possible impact. Growth, Stability, and Equity in Agriculture Arup Chattopadhyay,2001 Study on the agricultural performance of West Bengal during 1957 1994 Kashmir and Sindh Suranjan Das,2001 Professor Das provides a fascinating study on the issue of ethnic politics in multi ethnic Third World countries and the non convergence of state and nation in this discussion of the Kashmir and Sindh questions The artificial de colonization process in the South Asian sub continent resulted in the construction of national frontiers for its two successor states that did not rest on a synchronization of ethnic and state boundaries Consequently cross border loyalties amongst significant sections of the population survived the boundaries imposed between the two successor states When in the context of centralizing nation building strategies ethnic political assertions occur in outlying or frontier areas of these nation states the distinction between domestic and external affairs or between home and foreign politics tends to lose its significance in the traditional sense Political actors from across the borders of neighbouring state can then deny the marks of their different objective nationalities and treat themselves as members of a single loyalty group Thus ethnic politics transcends its domestic contours and helps foment regional tensions In such circumstances ethnic assertions tend to constitute vital local or domestic ingredients that define the national security priorities within a particular region The current insurrection in Kashmir and turmoil in Sindh superbly demonstrate this pattern
