Contract Management Alain Brunet, Franck César, 2021-07-30 This book presents the latest findings relating to behavioral economics and the digital tools applied to contract management There has been a decisive change in the role of contracts in the past decade with contracts being transformed from purely legal necessities designed to protect against worst case scenarios into tools for optimizing ongoing and mutually profitable business relationships with customers There is an increasing emphasis on tight contracts where time risk and additional costs are passed on to the prime contractor who may suffer heavy penalties in the event of non performance Contracts shape the behavior of the parties involved and as such have a major impact on project success The contract manager's goals are to protect the interests of the company and its shareholders by minimizing the company's financial and contractual liabilities and to maximize its profitability while ensuring end user satisfaction The contract is usually written before the design is fully developed and there is often a mismatch between contractual specifications and what the customer actually wants Good contract management entails preserving the rights of the contractor by ensuring all parties respect their contractual obligations providing advice to the project managers and engineering team preparing profitable amendments to contracts or change requests maintaining good record keeping in the event that claims arise filing notices when necessary and guiding the project to a profitable conclusion Like the ancient Chinese game of Go moves made early in the game notification of events can shape the nature of a potential conflict one hundred moves later arbitration threat Contract management can also smooth the relationship between partners allowing well balanced don't trade a dollar for a penny contracts to be managed through an established process rather than as sporadic events we cannot claim to be in control of our business if we are not

HC 585 - Transforming Contract Management Great Britain. Parliament. House of Commons. Committee of Public Accounts,2014 The private sector delivers complex services on behalf of the public sector to the value of around 90 billion which represents half of public sector expenditure on goods and services The public needs to have confidence that contracts are managed well by both government departments and the contractors themselves The case of G4S and Serco overcharging the Ministry of Justice for years on electronic tagging contracts was the starkest illustration of both contractors failure to work in the public interest and government failure to safeguard taxpayers money The electronic tagging case has served as a belated wake up call and led by the Cabinet Office the Government is now working to improve the way it manages its suppliers and contracted out providers of public services This report sets out four key areas for attention contractors have not shown an appropriate duty of care in the use of public funds quasi monopoly suppliers squeeze out competition often from smaller companies with specific experience the way government contracts gives too much advantage to the contractors
