Contrasts In Emerging Societies:

Contrasts in Punishment John Pratt, Anna Eriksson, 2014-06-03 Why do some modern societies punish their offenders differently to others Why are some more punitive and others more tolerant in their approach to offending and how can these differences be explained Based on extensive historical analysis and fieldwork in the penal systems of England Australia and New Zealand on the one hand and Finland Norway and Sweden on the other this book seeks to answer these questions The book argues that the penal differences that currently exist between these two clusters of societies emanate from their early nineteenth century social arrangements when the Anglophone societies were dominated by exclusionary value systems that contrasted with the more inclusionary values of the Nordic countries The development of their penal programmes over this two hundred year period including the much earlier demise of the death penalty in the Nordic countries and significant differences between the respective prison rates and prison conditions of the two clusters reflects the continuing influence of these values Indeed in the early 21st century these differences have become even more pronounced John Pratt and Anna Eriksson offer a unique contribution to this topic of growing importance comparative research in the history and sociology of punishment This book will be of interest to those studying criminology sociology punishment prison and penal policy as well as professionals working in prisons or in the area of penal policy across the six societies that feature in the book The

Janos, 2012-01-20 Why did Hungary a country that shared much of the religious and institutional heritage of western Europe fail to replicate the social and political experiences of the latter in the nineteenth and early twenties centuries The answer the author argues lies not with cultural idiosyncracies or historical accident but with the internal dynamics of the modern world system that stimulated aspirations not easily realizable within the confines of backward economics in peripheral national states The author develops his theme by examining a century of Hungarian economic social and political history During the period under consideration the country witnessed attempts to transplant liberal institutions from the West the corruption of these institutions into a neo corporatist bureaucratic state and finally the rise of diverse Left and Right radical movements as much in protest against this institutional corruption as against the prevailing global division of labor and economic inequality Pointing to significant analogies between the Hungarian past and the plight of the countries of the Third World today this work should be of interest not only to the specialist on East European politics but also to students of development dependency and center periphery relations in the contemporary world Peasant Violence and Antisemitism in Early Twentieth-Century Eastern Europe Irina
