Contribution Of Income Components To Income Inequality In South Africa:

The Contribution of Income Components to Income Inequality in South Africa M. V. Leibbrandt, Christopher D. Woolard, Ingrid D. Woolard, 1996

The Contribution of Income Components to Income Inequality in the Rural Former Homelands of South Africa Murray Leibbrandt, Christopher Woolard, Ingrid Woolard, 2000 Households in developing countries adopt livelihood strategies that often rely on income from a diversity of sources From a policy perspective it becomes important to understand the relative importance of income sources in driving inter household inequality and poverty Recent theoretical advances allow for the decomposition of the Gini coefficient by income components and for an assessment of the impact of changes in income components on the Gini coefficient This paper applies such a technique to South African data for the rural former homeland areas In doing so the paper extends existing knowledge of South African income inequality Particular attention is paid to integrating the decomposition work into debates about rural development policy in South Africa

Nonfarm Income, Inequality, and Poverty in Rural Egypt and Jordan Richard H. Adams, 2001 Nonfarm income has a greater impact on poverty and inequality in Egypt than in Jordan In rural Egypt the poor receive almost 60 percent of their income from nonfarm sources while in rural Jordan they receive less than 20 percent The reason for this difference is land in rural Egypt agricultural land is very productive but access is quite limited and so the poor are pushed into nonfarm work while in rural Jordan land is not very productive and access is not highly prized In both countries the best way to reduce poverty and inequality might be to focus on nonfarm unskilled labor

Why Race Matters in South Africa Michael MacDonald, 2006 This book tells the story of how the transition to democracy in South Africa enfranchised blacks politically but without raising most of them from poverty Although democratic South Africa is officially non racial the book shows that racial solidarities continue to play a role in the country's political economy

Institutional Constraints to Small Farmer Development in Southern Africa Ajuruchukwu Obi, 2011-04-27 The Southern Africa region has experienced more than its fair share of problems in recent years Just when it seemed that the hardships wrought by the devastating cycle of droughts and floods of 2000 to 2002 were a thing of the past other problems emerged At one level there have been the weak and often erratic governance mechanisms and political crises in some countries of the region leading to severe disruptions in agricultural production to the point that supplies and markets have virtually disappeared At another level socio cultural rigidities have often militated against the adoption of efficient farming practices resulting in sub optimal choices that lock smallholders into a low equilibrium trap In the face of the disappearing supplies and missing markets these have engendered hyper inflationary trends of a magnitude unknown anywhere else in the world But in the midst of all this apparent dreariness cases are emerging from which immense lessons can be drawn This book assembles a collection of research papers based on studies completed in 2008 and 2009 in Southern Africa that examine various dimensions of the institutional constraints small farmers are facing in the region and how they are going about dealing with them The papers draw from these diverse and polar experiences and present some theoretical and practical insights that should form the basis for more in depth country level sector specific analyses focusing mainly on citrus horticultures cotton and livestock The thematic issues of income inequality land reform natural resource management and value chain governance and chain choice are covered in this book and are expected to be of interest for a wide constituency including researchers development practitioners rural animators and policy makers
