Court Appointed Marriage:

Legal Pluralism in the Holy City Ido Shahar, 2016-03-09 This book provides an unprecedented portrayal of a lively shari'a court in contemporary West Jerusalem which belongs to the Israeli legal system but serves Palestinian residents of the eastern part of the city. It draws a rich picture of an intriguing institution operating in an environment marked by legal pluralism and by exceptional political and cultural tensions. The book suggests an organizational/institutional approach to legal pluralism which examines not only the relations between bodies of law but also the relations between courts of law serving the same population. Based on participant observations in the studied court as well as on textual and legal analyses of court cases and rulings, the study combines history and ethnography, diachronic and synchronic perspectives, and examines broad macro-political processes as well as micro-level interactions. The book offers fresh perspectives on the phenomenon of legal pluralism on shari'a law in practice and on Palestinian-Israeli relations in the divided city of Jerusalem. The work is a valuable resource for academics and researchers working in the areas of Legal Pluralism, Islamic Law, and socio-legal history of the Middle East.

What Women Want Dr. Graciela M. Lewis, 2012-09-25 This book is a self-help book for men, but women will probably read it too. Women are so smart they want to know whatever they can about themselves. But this piece is written in a simple and easy format. No big words. It is my hope that this book helps a man to better be able to know what his woman wants. By him knowing what his woman wants, he can provide it for her or at least understand why she wants it.
