Wassell, Ian Stith, 2007-06-13 This book explores what happens as beginning urban teachers transition through their first few years in the classroom It captures one teacher s journey through the first three years of teaching science and mathematics in a large urban district in the US Combining narrative with critical analysis the authors focus on Ian s agency as a beginning teacher and explore his success in working with diverse students Mathematical Cognition James M. Mitra, 2014-03-14 High schools continue to be places that isolate alienate and disengage students But what would happen if students were viewed as part of the solution in schools rather than part of the problem This book examines the emergence of student voice at one high school in the San Francisco Bay area where educators went straight to the source and asked the students to help Struggling like many high schools with how to improve student outcomes educators at Whitman High School decided to invite students to participate in the reform process Dana L Mitra describes the evolution of student voice at Whitman showing that the students enthusiastically created partnerships with teachers and administrators engaged in meaningful discussion about why so many failed or dropped out and partnered with teachers and principals to improve learning for themselves and their peers In documenting the difference that student voice made this book helps expand ideas of distributed leadership professional learning communities and collaboration The book also contributes much needed research on what student voice initiatives look like in practice and provides powerful evidence of ways in which young people can increase their sense of agency and their sense of belonging in school

Mathematics Classrooms in Twelve Countries David Clarke, Christine Keitel, Yoshinori Shimizu, 2006 The Learner's Perspective Study aims to juxtapose the observable practices of the classroom and the meanings attributed to those practices by classroom participants The LPS research design documents sequences of at least ten lessons using three video cameras supplemented by the reconstructive accounts of classroom participants obtained in post lesson video stimulated interviews and by test and questionnaire data and copies of student written material In each participating country data generation focuses on the classrooms of three teachers identified by the local mathematics education community as competent and situated in demographically different school communities within the one major city The large body of complex data supports both the characterisation of practice in the classrooms of competent teachers and the development of theory

Word Problems Stephen K. Reed,1998-12 Integrates work from cognitive psychology mathematics education and instructional technologies to inform readers of what is known about how people solve or fail to solve word problems and how this knowledge can improve instruction
