Each exercise uses one pitch which allows the student to focus completely on time and rhythm. Exercises use modern innovations common to twentieth century notation thereby familiarizing the student with the most sophisticated systems likely to be encountered in the course of a musical career. During the 1990s in connection with my licentiate thesis Solfeggio in the Computer Classroom 2000 I initiated a research project which focused on learning outcomes in middle grade and higher level classes and started to develop a CAI method for teaching and learning music theory and ear training. In his essay in 1949 Zoltán Kodály drafted his ideas very clearly on the importance of music. A k

vetkez l p s The next step is to introduce people to the secrets of the many parts of music to pave the way towards the monumental works of world literature To move away from the narrow limits of unison to music of two or more parts which in its restrictions holds more freedom This is the way of democracy in music Unison song with a simple instrumental accompaniment also develops some passive and obscure almost subconscious sense of harmony But our ear can only completely receive the polyphonic music if we learn to sing one part without instrumental accompaniment so that we can concentrate on the other parts In this way we can seek to understand that type of music where the parts are not living by themselves alone but by helping and complementing each other they create a unit of a higher level This ability develops slowly but practicing it is not boring in fact it is delightful since this journey leads towards the great masterpieces through more and more beautiful music Kod ly 1975 1949 253 Translated Kirsti Fekete

Computer-aided Ear-training Susanna Király,2016-07-14 My doctoral thesis has involved two related tasks The first was to analyse Zolt n Kod ly s philosophy of music education and on this basis to develop a computer assisted instruction method CAI for teaching music theory and self ge ear training The second task was to experiment with the effectiveness of this method and compare it with traditional approaches to teaching Many student find music theory and ear training difficult During the 1990s in connection with my licentiate thesis Self ge in the Computer Classroom 2000 I initiated this research project and developed a CAI method for teaching music theory and self ge I wanted to see just how useful Kod ly s approach could be in computer aided teaching and learning The results show that the Kod ly approach can be successfully applied to the development of a computer aided self ge programme and the Kod ly system is applicable to new learning environments and teaching practices In music education CAI is an area with great potential for development It offers multiple learning options and can enhance students motivation to study music theory and ear training some of the learning outcomes were even better than with the traditional ways of learning The results also show however that the teacher pupil interaction is essential in a computer aided learning programme
