The Metabolic Syndrome and Obesity George A. Bray, 2008-01-23 Thirty years ago I published my first monograph on obesity Bray 1976 Many things have changed in these 30 years but many have remained the same Preparation of The Metabolic Syndrome and Obesity has given me a chance to survey the changes to the field and to present an update of the scientific information In retrospect I conclude that a major component of the current epidemic of overweight is not medical not genetic not psychological and will not be effectively treated by lifestyle changes that require individual choices We are all influenced by the prices of the goods we buy With the reduction in food prices and distortion of commercially profitable products resulting from federal subsidies of corn sugar and rice the food industry has been able to produce cheap good tasting energy dense foods and can sell them cheaply in large portion sizes In contrast foods like fruits and vegetables receive little in the way of subsidies and are thus more expensive thus we buy less Providing more healthy food alternatives as some advocate will put items with higher costs on the shelves and is in my view unlikely to alter consumer choices as long as good tasting energy dense foods remain cheap

HISTORICAL CONTEXT FOR OBESITY

Nutrition Research at the Leading Edge Russell E. Cassady, Erma I. Tidswell, 2008 Nutraceuticals are established food components widely consumed as supplements to the diet either as formulated products or for fortification of foods particularly functional foods Over the last two decades there has been a steady growth in research into the possible health benefits Both the general public and the media have become increasingly interested and this has coincided with a general interest in health issues This has resulted in increasing usage of commercially available products as well as their food sources It is now well understood that modern pharmaceuticals cannot successfully treat all diseases coupled with their lack of effectiveness in certain disease states and the possibility of marked side effects There is logical use of a number of nutraceuticals which are endogenous nutrients from a range of food sources as many diseases maybe caused by deficiency states
