Content Area Reading Literacy And Learning Across The Curriculum 8th Edition:

Content Area Reading Richard T. Vacca, Jo Anne L. Vacca, 2009 Content Area Reading remains the market leading text in content literacy and maintains the authors original objective to offer an ambitious coherent and workable exploration of content literacy The Ninth Edition comes at a perfect time when there is an increased focus on adolescent literacy With the point of view that students learn with texts not necessarily from them respected authors Rich and Jo Anne Vacca have written this book to be an active learning tool complete with real world examples and research based practices Thoroughly updated and revised to incorporate topics that touch on contemporary issues such as content standards assessment diversity struggling readers the No Child Left Behind Legislation Reading First and Reading Next the book continues to provide a framework that focuses on the ability to use reading writing speaking and listening processes to learn subject matter across the curriculum Accessible and comprehensible this text takes students through the entire reading process using simple jargon free terminology The methodology presented develops a foundation that can be applied across disciplines meeting the needs of all students A Letter to Readers from the Authors To Our Readers We published the first edition of Content Area Reading in 1981 Some of you may be wondering with good reason why did we have to revise the same book nine times Has education in general and content literacy in particular changed that much in nearly thirty years to warrant nine editions of the same book While we have remained true to the original intent of the book throughout these years our answer to these questions is an enthusiastic Yes We have witnessed dramatic changes over the past three decades in the way we think about literacy what it means to be literate and the ways we put literacy to use to learn enjoy imagine explore the world and interact with others Some of the revisions that we have made from the eighth to ninth edition alone reflect the rapidly changing landscape of content literacy specifically and education generally The renewed and hotly political debate over the role of content knowledge the what of teaching and pedagogical knowledge the how of teaching the development of highly qualified teachers teaching learning and assessment in a standards based curriculum the role and responsibility of literacy coaches in today s schools the crisis in adolescent literacy across ability levels the meaning and importance of culturally responsive instruction and literacy strategies for learners who first language is other than English the impact of assessment on instructional practices the role of confidence motivation and engaged learning in literacy related instructional practices the ability to work smart in independent learning contexts the meaning and application of new literacies in today s classrooms Today one of the hottest topics in education is adolescent literacy Our book mainly emphasizes how adolescents use literacy to learn across the curriculum how adolescents will approach reading with enthusiasm and confidence in their ability to make sense out of academic texts While the focus of our book has always been on instructional strategies we underscore in this edition the ways that content area teachers can actively engage older students in learning with all kinds of texts whether printed or digital in nature Perhaps somewhere in the heavens there is a Greek god of reading who breathes into human beings an intense interest in the act of reading Perhaps not The reality of reading school related texts for many adolescents is simply this Many of today s older students regardless of ability level would rather have root canal surgery than engage enthusiastically in academic reading tasks Yet we believe that teachers are in a strategic position to make a difference in the way their students approach reading and learn with texts The pa

Teaching Reading in the Content Areas Vicki Urquhart,Dana Frazee,2012-07-03 History teachers aren t expected to teach science math teachers aren t expected to teach social studies so why are all teachers responsible for teaching reading The answer is simple An emphasis on reading and literacy skills in the content areas has an exponential effect on learning in every discipline This completely revised third edition of the best selling Teaching Reading in the Content Areas seeks to help educators understand how to teach reading in their respective disciplines choose the best reading strategies from the vast array available and positively impact student learning Throughout it draws from new research on the impact of new technologies the population boom of English language learners and the influence of the Common Core State Standards Given the complexities of the reading process teachers deserve and this book provides clear research based answers to overarching questions about teaching reading in the content areas What specific skills do students need to read effectively in each content area Which reading strategies are most appropriate to help students become more effective readers and independent learners What type of learning environment promotes effective reading and learning By focusing on the differences in how content area experts read and reason teachers can be better prepared to help their students understand that the ways they read in biology are different from the ways they read in English history or mathematics To read successfully in different content areas students must develop discipline specific skills and strategies along with knowledge of that discipline With that in mind this book also includes 40 strategies designed to help students in every grade level and across the content areas develop their vocabularies comprehend informational and narrative texts and engage in meaningful discussions of what they read
