Legal Reform and Business Contracts in Developing Economies Julie Paquin, 2016-04-22 This book examines the prospects for business law reform to drive economic development in developing countries It argues that despite statements to the contrary cultural factors and other local conditions in developing countries are not properly taken into account in current business law reform programs Utilizing the city of Dakar as an example this book investigates the consequences of this lack of fit between local needs and transplanted legal models by examining the potential and actual impact of the OHADA program of law reform on local business practices Focusing on how managers make decisions and apply appropriate norms in routine business operations the book documents how contractual disputes arise and are solved in Dakar and the role played by formal law in these processes By examining imported law from the point of view of the end users of legal reforms the book reveals the complex relationship between formal law local cultural norms and the activities of SMEs operating in developing economies and calls for a reconsideration of current law and development theory as well as the role of contract law in business decisions It will be relevant to all developing countries seeking to align their laws with best practice as identified by aid institutions The Structure of United Nations Economic-Aid to Underdeveloped Countries U.

Kirdar,2013-11-27 It is becoming increasingly evident that the existence together in a diminishing world of rich nations and very poor nations is the critical problem of our time and indeed other questions of international relations are rapidly taking on the appearance of being merely aspects of this central crux According to some authorities it may only be a matter of a few years before the food and population question takes on such alarming proportions as to make our present troubles on the international scene seem slight by comparison It is only against this background that we can fully appreciate the significance of the United Nations institutions and procedures for the mediation of aid whether financial or technical to developing countries and indeed also for the flow of credit and skills between countries generally for few nations or none belong wholly to one side in this matter and the whole question is one that vitally affects the immediate futures of every one of the members of the international community Department of Agriculture Appropriation Bill United States.
