Dynamics and Mechanism of DNA-Bending Proteins in Binding Site Recognition Yogambigai

Velmurugu,2016-11-29 Using a novel approach that combines high temporal resolution of the laser T jump technique with unique sets of fluorescent probes this study unveils previously unresolved DNA dynamics during search and recognition by an architectural DNA bending protein and two DNA damage recognition proteins Many cellular processes involve special proteins that bind to specific DNA sites with high affinity How these proteins recognize their sites while rapidly searching amidst 3 billion nonspecific sites in genomic DNA remains an outstanding puzzle Structural studies show that proteins severely deform DNA at specific sites and indicate that DNA deformability is a key factor in site specific recognition However the dynamics of DNA deformations have been difficult to capture thus obscuring our understanding of recognition mechanisms The experiments presented in this thesis uncover for the first time rapid 100 500 microseconds DNA unwinding bending attributed to nonspecific interrogation prior to slower 5 50 milliseconds DNA kinking bending nucleotide flipping during recognition These results help illuminate how a searching protein interrogates DNA deformability and eventually stumbles upon its target site Submillisecond interrogation may promote preferential stalling of the rapidly scanning protein at cognate sites thus enabling site recognition Such multi step search interrogation recognition processes through dynamic conformational changes may well be common to the recognition mechanisms for diverse DNA binding proteins

Making Modernism Soviet Pamela Kachurin, 2013 This book provides an understanding of the ideological engagement of Russian modern artists such as Kazimir Malevich Alexander Rodchenko and Vera Ermolaeva with the political and social agenda of the Bolsheviks in the chaotic years immediately following the Russian Revolution Focusing on the relationship between power brokers and cultural institutions under conditions of state patronage the author lays to rest the myth of the imposition of control from above upon a victimized artistic community Drawing on extensive archival research she shows that Russian modernists used their positions within the expanding Soviet arts bureaucracy to build up networks of like minded colleagues Their commitment to one another and to the task of creating a socially transformative visual language for the new Soviet context allowed them to produce some of their most famous works of art But it also contributed to the Sovietization of the art world that eventually sealed their fate
