Aquaculture Development In China:

Aquaculture Development in China Nathanaël Hishamunda, Rohana P. Subasinghe, 2003-01-01 This report was prepared within the framework of the FAO Fisheries Department's continued efforts to contribute to poverty alleviation and hunger reduction in developing countries through aquaculture development. It seeks to analyse the reasons and factors especially the role of public sector policies which were behind aquaculture development in China. The aim is to make the Chinese experience available to other parts of the world especially developing countries to enable these countries to evaluate ways whereby they could benefit from this experience of sustainable and lucrative aquaculture practices. The report discusses valuable lessons that can be learned from the Chinese experience. Aquaculture Development in China Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations. De Silva, 2018-07-16 Fish have been a major component of our diet and it has been suggested that fish seafood consumption contributed to the development of the human brain and this together with the acquisition of bipedalism perhaps made us what we are. In the modern context global fish consumption is increasing. However, unlike our other staples until a few years back the greater proportion of our fish supplies were of a hunted origin. This scenario is changing and a greater proportion of fish we consume now is of farmed origin. Aquaculture, the farming of waters, is thought to have originated in China many millennia ago. Nevertheless, it transformed into a major food sector only since the second half of the last century and continues to forge ahead primarily in the developing world. China leads the global aquaculture production in volume in the number of species that are farmed and have contributed immensely to transforming the practices from an art to a science. This book attempts to capture some of the key elements and practices that have contributed to the success of Chinese aquaculture. The book entails contributions from over 100 leading experts in China and provides insights into some aquaculture practices that are little known to the rest of the world. This book will be essential reading for aquaculturists, practitioners, researchers, and students and planners and developers. Fresh Water Aquaculture Development in China FAO/UNDP Study Tour Organized for French Speaking Countries, 1938 over fishing aquaculture will have a more significant role to play in meeting future demand for fresh fish. Developments in research continue to lead to improvements in aquaculture production systems resulting in increased production efficiency, higher product quality for consumers and a more sustainable industry. New technologies in aquaculture reviews essential advances in these areas. Part one focuses on the genetic improvement of farmed species and control of reproduction with chapters on genome based technologies in aquaculture, selective breeding and the production of single sex and sterile populations among other topics. Parts two and three review key issues in health, diet and husbandry such as the control of viral and parasitic diseases, diet and husbandry techniques to improve disease resistance, advances in diets for particular fish species and the impact of harmful algal bloom on shellfisheries aquaculture. Chapters in Parts three and four then examine the design of different aquaculture production systems including offshore technologies, tank based recirculating systems and ponds and key environmental issues such as the prediction and assessment of the impact of aquaculture. Concluding chapters focus on farming new species. With its well known editors and distinguished international team of contributors, New technologies in aquaculture is an essential purchase for professionals and researchers in the aquaculture industry. Reviews recent advances in improvements in aquaculture production. Focuses on the genetic improvement and reproduction of farmed species including genome based technologies. Discusses key health issues including advances in disease diagnosis, vaccine development and other emerging methods to control pathogens in aquaculture. Country Case Study, 2008. The conference was developed in five sessions. In the first session, Aquaculture Growing Strength, an overview on production and trade was followed by five commodity presentations showing the success in shrimp, salmon, tilapia, catfish and bivalve aquaculture. The second session on Challenges highlighted the current and future challenges facing the sector. These included challenges related to assuring food safety in aquaculture products, maintaining and improving consumers' perceptions of the quality and environmental acceptability of aquaculture, improving aquatic animal health management, addressing issues related to feed quality and availability and improving the view investors take to assure economic and financial sustainability. During the third session, the Advantages and Opportunities of aquaculture were covered by taking into account the globalization process and the requirements of processors and the food service and retail sectors which all seem to have a preference for aquaculture products under special conditions. Seafood and health benefits and the potential offered new species were seen as driving factors in the aquaculture sector. The opportunities and challenges for the small scale fish farmers in Southeast Asia were also considered. The fourth session was fully dedicated to the aquaculture sector in China with presentations on the domestic market, the export potential, safety and quality inspection and China's role in reprocessing seafood for re-export to the global market. In the last session on Progress The Future, the future developments expected for aquaculture were covered. Here the interaction between capture fisheries and aquaculture was analyzed and also presented in a case study on wild and aquacultured salmon Aquaculture was viewed within the context of other intensive animal production systems The enormous potential of the technical innovations in aquaculture compared to capture fisheries was highlighted under the term of Blue revolution The last session was closed with a description of the political framework required to allow for the sustainable development of aquaculture Aquaculture, 1979-84 Henry Gilbert,1984
