Aquaculture Development In Less Developed Countries:

Aquaculture Development In Less Developed Countries Leah Smith, 2019-03-01 Aquaculture may not be the panacea for the world's food problems but it has the potential to make important contributions to diet and incomes in some areas. This book intended to improve planning for further development of aquaculture examines the factors that can determine the success or failure of aquaculture projects in developing countries.

Aquaculture Development in Less Developed Countries; Social, Economic, and Political Problems Susan Peterson, Leah J. Smith, 1982 Environment and Aquaculture in Developing Countries Roger S. V. Pullin, H. Rosenthal, John L. Maclean, 1993 Regional review on status and trends in aquaculture development in Latin America and the Caribbean - 2020 Wurmman, C. Soto, D.,

Norambuena, R., 2022-01-06 This document reviews the development of the aquaculture industry in the Latin America and the Caribbean region over the past decade. In 2018, aquaculture production in the region amounted to an estimated 3.1 million tonnes of aquatic products excluding seaweeds worth USD 17.2 billion at first sale. This food sector is vastly concentrated in a few countries with the combined output from Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Ecuador, and Mexico representing over 85 percent of the total regional production. Atlantic salmon, rainbow trout, tilapia, whiteleg shrimp, and the Chilean mussel collectively contributed 80.4 percent and 85.9 percent of the regional production by volume and value respectively. Marine aquaculture has been the dominant production environment in the region for the past two decades, accounting for 70.1 percent of the farmed output in 2018. Production models vary widely with a concentration of large-scale companies in Chile while primarily small and/or medium-size operations in Brazil, Peru, and several other countries. Introduced species remain top on the list among those farmed, such as tilapia and the different salmonids, both of which have contributed to local livelihoods and employment. Tilapia farming has contributed significantly to food security in many countries of the region while the largest proportion of farmed salmon has been destined to the export markets. Production prospects remain promising; however, the industry requires in general better governance, the adoption at all levels of appropriate technologies and best practices, and renewed efforts to guarantee environmental sustainability and social acceptance as well as competitiveness and foresight to deal with climate and market changes. The small island developing states (SIDS) face additional challenges including limited expertise, high production costs, poor seed supplies, as well as extreme and destructive weather events. The report discusses issues that require wider regional attention for the aquaculture sector to grow. Key recommendations focus on governance-related improvements, highlighting the need for solid sectoral development plans, support policies, and effective rules and regulations. The promotion of a stronger cooperation among the countries in the region as well as further fieldwork on technical matters, species diversification, and equal support to small and large-scale farming operations are identified as key elements to foster investment and help the region gain a solid position among world aquatic food producers.
