Pastoral states: toward a comparative archaeology of early Kush Geoff Emberling, 2017-03-07T00:00:00+01:00 Ancient Kush was one of the earliest complex societies in Africa yet it is not normally considered in comparative archaeologies of states and empires This paper makes the case for considering Kush as a culturally distinctive trajectory to political authority social inequality and economic complexity It also considers reasons for its omission from comparative studies which include a past focus on primary states a lack of fit with existing archaeological classifications of ancient societies the overshadowing effect of ancient Egypt to the north and lingering institutional prejudice Recent research on early Kush the Kerma period in archaeological terms has recovered increasingly detailed evidence from its major urban center at Kerma but has also begun to gather regional data on the expansion and internal structure of early Kush Among its many distinctive features the most significant for understanding the unusual features of its trajectory may be the role of cattle herding and likely associated mobility of population

Archaeology in the PPG16 Era Timothy Darvill, Kerry Barrass, Vanessa Constant, Ehren Milner, Bronwen Russell, 2019-02-28 The Archaeological Investigations Project AIP funded by English Heritage systematically collected information about the nature and outcomes of more than 86 000 archaeological projects undertaken between 1990 and 2010 This volume looks at the long term trends in archaeological investigation and reporting places this work within wider social political and professional contexts and reviews its achievements Information was collected through visits to public and private organizations undertaking archaeological work Planning Policy Guidance Note 16 Archaeology and Planning known as PPG16 published in 1990 saw the formal integration of archaeological considerations with the UK town and country planning system that and set out processes for informed decision making and the implementation of post determination mitigation strategies defined a formative era in archaeological practice and established principles that underpin today's planning policy framework. The scale of activity represented more 1000 excavations per year for most of the PPG16 Era is more than double the level of work undertaken at peak periods during the previous three decades. This comprehensive review of the project presents a wealth of data. A series of case studies examines the illustrate different types of development project revealing many ways in which projects develop how archaeology is integrated with planning and execution and the range of outputs documenting the process and identified a series of ten important lessons that can be learned from these investigations. Looking into the post PPG16 Era the volume considers anticipated developments in the changing worlds of planning property development and archaeological practice and proposes the monitoring of archaeological investigations in England using a two pronged approach that involves self reporting and periodic strategic overviews.

Museums and Archaeology Robin Skeates, 2022-06-19 Museums and Archaeology brings together a wide but carefully chosen selection of literature from around the world that connects museums and archaeology. Part of the successful Leicester Readers in Museum Studies series it provides a combination of issue and practice based perspectives. As such it is a volume not only for students and researchers from a range of disciplines interested in museum gallery and heritage studies including public archaeology and cultural resource management CRM but also the wide range of professionals and volunteers in the museum and heritage sector who work with archaeological collections. The volume's balance of theory and practice and its thematic and geographical breadth is explored and explained in an extended introduction which situates the readings in the context of the extensive literature on museum archaeology highlighting the many tensions that exist between idealistic principles and real life practice and the debates that surround these. In addition to this section introductions and the seminal pieces themselves provide a comprehensive and contextualised resource on the interplay of museums and archaeology.

Archaeology and History in Roman, Medieval and Post-Medieval Greece Linda Jones Hall, 2016-12-05 The essays in Archaeology and History in Roman Medieval and Post Medieval Greece honor the contributions of Timothy E Gregory to our understanding of Greece from the Roman period to modern times. Evoking Gregory's diverse interests the volume brings together anthropologists art historians archaeologists historians and philologists to address such contested topics as the end of Antiquity the so called Byzantine Dark Ages the contours of the emerging Byzantine civilization and identity in post Medieval Greece. These papers demonstrate the continued vitality of both traditional and innovative approaches to the study of material culture and emphasise that historical interpretation should be the product of methodological self awareness. In particular this volume shows how the study of the material culture of post Classical Greece over the last 30 years has made significant contributions to both the larger archaeological and historical discourse. The essays in this volume are organized under three headings Archaeology and Method the Archaeology of Identity and the Changing Landscape which highlight three main focuses of Gregory's research. Each essay interlaces new analyses with the contributions Gregory has made to our understanding of Medieval and Post Medieval Greece. Read together these essays not only make a significant contribution to how we understand the post Classical Greek world but also to how we study the material culture of the Mediterranean world more broadly Towards Reflexive Method in Archaeology Ian Hodder, 2017-10-01 In the early 1990s the University of Cambridge reopened excavations at the Neolithic site of atalh y k in central Turkey abandoned since the 1960s This is Volume 2 in the atalh y k Research Project series Here Ian Hodder explains his vision of archaeological excavation where careful examination of context and an awareness of human bias allows researchers exciting new insights into prehistoric cognition The aim of the volume is to discuss some of the reflexive or postprocessual methods that have been introduced at the site in the work there since 1993 These methods involve reflexivity interactivity multivocality and contextuality or relationality Using Computers in Archaeology Gary R. Lock, 2003 This is the first comprehensive review of computer applications in archaeology from the archaeologist s perspective The book deals with all aspects of the discipline from survey and excavation to museums and education British & Irish Archaeological Bibliography, 1998 Buddhist Manuscript Cultures Stephen C. Berkwitz, Juliane Schober, Claudia Brown, 2009-01-13 Buddhist Manuscript Cultures explores how religious and cultural practices in premodern Asia were shaped by literary and artistic traditions as well as by Buddhist material culture This study of Buddhist texts focuses on the significance of their material forms rather than their doctrinal contents and examines how and why they were made Contributions are by reputed scholars in Buddhist Studies and represent diverse disciplinary approaches from religious studies art history anthropology and history Archaeology of the Communist Era Ludomir R Lozny, 2016-12-06 This book contributes to better recognition and comprehension of the interconnection between archaeology and political pressure especially imposed by the totalitarian communist regimes It explains why under such political conditions some archaeological reasoning and practices were resilient while new ideas leisurely penetrated the local scenes It attempts to critically evaluate the political context and its impact on archaeology during the communist era world wide and contributes to better perception of the relationship between science and politics in general This book analyzes the pressures inflicted on archaeologists by the overwhelmingly potent political environment which stimulates archaeological thought and controls the conditions for professional engagement Included are discussions about the perception of archaeology and its findings by the public A Crannog of the First Millennium, AD Anne Crone, Ewan Campbell, 2005 The early medieval crannog in Loch Glashan was excavated in 1960 by Jack Scott in advance of dam construction The crannog produced a rich organic assemblage of wood and leather objects as well as exotic items such as continental imported pottery and a brooch studded with amber This title examines all the evidence from the crannog A Companion to Archaeology John Bintliff, 2008-04-15 A Companion to Archaeology features essays from 27 of the world s leading authorities on different types of archaeology that aim to define the field and describe what it means to be an archaeologist Shows that contemporary archaeology is an astonishingly broad activity with many contrasting specializations and ways of approaching the material record of past societies Includes essays
