Applied Stream Sanitation Clarence J. Velz, 1970-01-15 Applied Stream Sanitation Clarence J. Velz, 1984 A revision of the successful text reference on rational methods of stream analysis presenting useful scientific and engineering tools for evaluating waste assimilation capacity and water quality in rivers and streams Emphasizes practical applications and actual pollution problems Three important new chapters examine self purification of nondegradables true metals and other toxics the impact of basinwide secondary biological treatment and mathematical modeling versus rational assessment methods

Engineering Methodology for River and Stream Reaeration Ronald P. Murro, JBF Scientific Corporation, Donald S. Yeaple, 1972 Results of recent activities in river and stream aeration by artificial techniques are reviewed and a rational engineering methodology is developed for future river and stream aeration projects The development of the methodology follows from a thorough review of the oxygen dynamics in rivers and streams and the capabilities of aeration systems within the present state of the art The report shows how the theoretical work can be simplified considerably and applied to the solution of river and stream water quality problems It is assumed that aeration would only be used as a polishing action The results indicate that artificial aeration can be applied successfully to raise dissolved oxygen to 5 ppm using mechanical surface aerators diffusers downflow contactors and sidestream mixing EPA-430/1, 1979-05 , U.S. Environmental Protection Agency Library System Book Catalog Holdings as of July 1973 United States.
