Fuzzy Logic in Time Series Prediction Oscar Castillo, Patricia Melin, 2024-05-13 This book focuses on the field of type 3 fuzzy logic for applications in time series prediction. The main idea is that a higher type and order of fuzzy logic can help in solving various prediction problems and find better results. In addition, neural networks and fractal theory are employed in enhancing prediction results. In this regard, several hybrid intelligent methods are offered. In this book, we test the proposed methods using several prediction problems like predicting COVID 19 and the stock market. We can notice that when Type 3 fuzzy systems are implemented to model the behavior of systems, the results in prediction are enhanced because the management of uncertainty is better. For this reason, we consider in this book the proposed methods using type 3 fuzzy systems, neural networks, and fractal theory to improve the prediction behavior of the complex nonlinear systems. This book is intended to be a reference for scientists and engineers interested in applying type 3 fuzzy logic techniques for solving complex prediction problems. This book can also be used as a reference for graduate courses like the following: soft computing, fuzzy logic, neural networks, bio-inspired algorithms, intelligent prediction, and similar ones. We consider that this book can also be used to get novel ideas for new lines of research or to continue the lines of research proposed by the authors of the book.

Bacterial Aerosols Resulting from Spray Irrigation with Wastewater Howard T. Bausum, 1976 Air sampling equipment was selected and adapted for the study of bacterial aerosols generated through land application of treated wastewater by spray irrigation. Preliminary data were obtained on bacteria present in treated and untreated domestic sewage at Army installations. Data were also obtained on survival of enteric bacteria in laboratory aerosols generated from wastewater at various relative humidities. A field study of 3 weeks duration was undertaken to measure aerosol dissemination of bacteria at a wastewater spray irrigation site at Ft Huachuca, AZ. Aerosol densities for the total aerobic bacteria ranged up to 1630 cu m at sampling points nearest the aerosol source. Confirmed coliform bacteria represented about 0.5 percent of the total and of those, nearly half were Klebsiella. Densities were greater under conditions of low wind, atmospheric stability, and darkness. A mathematical model predicting downwind aerosol densities was developed based on the dispersion equation of Pasquill and took into account the parameters of the spray equipment used. The model, in conjunction with fluorescein tracer data, was used in deriving an estimate of the fraction of wastewater entering the aerosol state.

Modeling and Simulation of Microstructure Evolution in Solidifying Alloys Laurentiu Nastac, 2007-05-08 The aim of Modeling and Simulation of Microstructure Evolution in Solidifying Alloys is to describe in a clear mathematical language the physics of the solidification structure evolution of cast alloys. The concepts and methodologies presented here for the net shaped casting and the ingot remelt processes can be applied with some modifications to model other solidification processes such as welding and deposition processes. Another aim of the book is to provide simulation examples of the solidification structure modeling in some crucial commercial casting technologies as well as to provide practical techniques for controlling the structure formation during the solidification.
