Environmental Fiscal Reform and Unemployment Carlo Carraro, D. Siniscalco, 2013-03-14 The European Union faces several interlinked challenges how to protect the environment and favour sustainability how to reduce unemployment and foster competitiveness in a context of growing globalization how to reduce regional disparities among and within member countries The recent policy debate has clarified that the above objectives are not a trade off if jointly tackled In particular win win policy options are available to the European Union by an appropriate integration of regulation macro policy social policy fiscal policy and environmental policy Evidence shows that optimising on each single policy will not meet the needs of the European Union On the contrary an integrated approach will make it possible to reach the various objectives as stated in the Treaty on European Union in the 5th Environmental Action Programme in the White Paper on Growth Competitiveness and Employment This integrated approach would implement a genuine sustainable development policy Money Demand in Europe Helmut Lütkepohl, Jürgen Wolters, 2013-04-17 In 1999 a number of member states of the European Union will adopt a common currency This change in the monetary system requires that a European Central Bank is set up and a common monetary policy is pursued There is general agreement among those countries which are likely to join the common currency that price level stability has to be the ultimate objective of monetary policy It is an open issue however what kind of policy is best suited for that purpose The alternative strategies under discussion are a direct inflation targeting an intermediate monetary targeting or a mixture of both For these policy strategies a stable money demand relation is of central importance Therefore a workshop on Money Demand in Europe was organized at the Humboldt University in Berlin on October 10 11 1997 This research conference brought together academic and central bank economists and econometricians predominantly from Europe to discuss issues on specification estimation and in particular stability of money demand relations both in a single equation and in a systems framework In this volume revised versions of the papers presented and discussed at the workshop are collected. The volume thereby gives an overview of money demand analysis in Europe on the eve of the introduction of the Euro in some European countries. It contributes to the discussion on a suitable monetary policy for the new European Central Bank. Comparative Advantage in International Trade Mirela Keuschnigg, 2012-12-06

Traditional trade theory explains trade only by differences between countries, notably differences in their relative endowments of factors of production. It suggests an inverse relationship between the similarity of countries and the volume of trade between them. The Heckscher-Ohlin-HO factor proportions theory derives the determinants of comparative advantage in a world of two different goods, two factors, two countries. It predicts that each country will export that good which uses the country's abundant factor relatively most intensively. The literature on trade offers an impressive number of studies based on the HO theory. The main methodological problems encountered in the literature are first the appropriate formulation of the HO theorem in a multi-factor, multi-good and multi-country framework; second, proper tests of the HO theory and proper links of the theory to empirical analysis. The relevance of the HO theory began to be questioned when important facts of modern international trade proved to be inconsistent with its theoretical framework. Leontief (1953) tested the factor proportions theory using the US data for 1947 and found that the US had more labor-intensive exports than imports, which is opposed to both perceptions and estimations of factor endowments. The Leontief paradox created doubt as to whether or not actual trade patterns and factor endowments are related as predicted by theory and caused many controversial discussions with regard to the proper empirical implementation of the factor proportions theory. International Economic Integration: Theory and measurement Miroslav Jovanovic, 1998 Handbook of Development Economics Hollis Chenery, Hollis Burnley

Athukorala, Jayatileke S. Bandara, Saman Kelegama, 2012-05-23 The link between trade liberalisation and poverty has arguably been one of the most debated topics in development policy debate Existing studies on the subject have primarily used multi country cross sectional data and there is a growing concern about the limitations of this approach in providing a sound empirical basis for informing the policy debate These limitations point to the need for undertaking in depth analyses within individual countries over time In order to examine the connection between trade liberalisation and poverty this book provides case studies of trade policy reforms and poverty reduction outcomes of seven countries in South Asia Bangladesh

Bhutan India Maldives Nepal Pakistan and Sri Lanka The South Asia region allows for an excellent comparative study given the widespread emphasis on liberalisation reforms in the region over the past two decades as well as highlighting significant inter country differences in terms of the timing and comprehensiveness of reforms and the heavy concentration of world poverty in the region This book is a useful contribution to studies on South Asia as well as International Trade and Development Economics Handbook of Agricultural Economics Bruce L.
