Self-protective measures to enhance airlift operations in hostile environments , Airlift Capabilities for Future U.S. Counterinsurgency Operations Robert C. Owen,Karl P. Mueller,2007 Current and probable future United States involvement in counterinsurgencies revives a long standing debate about whether these missions call for adding specialized aircraft training or other resources to the general military airlift fleet The authors examine the use of airlift in past and present counterinsurgency operations including the Foreign Internal Defense program They conclude that general U S airlift forces can accomplish most counterinsurgency missions effectively with adjustments in employment doctrines and training However they also note that continued operations likely will require reinforcement of the general airlift fleet and perhaps acquisition of a small fleet element optimized for certain counterinsurgency missions The Posture of Military Airlift United States. E. Miller,U.S. Air University. Center for Aerospace Doctrine, Research, and Education,United States. Air University. Maxwell Air Force Base, Alabama,1988 Airlift is the movement of goods and people to where they are needed when they are needed there Since the 1920s there has been an evolving awareness and articulation of how to best organize train and equip airlift forces for that mission The worldwide orientation of American foreign policy the numerous threats to free world interests and the speed and complexity of modern warfare have combined with political and resource constraints to produce today s airlift doctrine and force structure Colonel

Miller's study traces these many interrelationships to discover what critical airlift decisions were made why they were made and what they may mean in the future This is not a history of military airlift but rather an investigation of ideas and concepts as they have evolved and have been applied to warfighting Airlift is the backbone of deterrence A properly structured and equipped airlift force is critical to the successful execution of the national military strategy How we think about airlift and how we translate those thoughts into a meaningful expression of how to develop deploy and employ airlift forces is vital to the national defense Colonel Miller's study is a definitive step in that important process

The 31 Initiatives: A Study in Air Force-Army Cooperation Richard G. Davis, 1987 This monograph analyzes US military air power US Army relations from 1907 to the present It emphasizes one aspect of those relations how air forces intended for the tactical support of ground forces can best be controlled and integrated into the overall ground battle After a review of changing air ground relationships from 1907 to 1982 this work examines the 31 Initiatives the most recent US Army US Air Force agreement on developing joint combat forces and battlefield cooperation It also discusses the process behind the formulation of the 31 Initiatives and discusses how that process provides one example of the introduction of innovation or change into a military organization In addition this work details the immediate and longer term response of the two services to the Initiatives The importance of this monograph is twofold It supplies a case study of innovation and more significantly it places the 31 Initiatives in their place as the far reaching and comprehensive end product of a decade of Air Force Army cooperation

Air University Review, 1986-05 Airlift Doctrine Charles Miller, LtC Charles E Miller, 2012-08-01 In this extremely comprehensive overview of airlift and air mobility Colonel Miller shows how the worldwide orientation of American foreign policy the numerous threats to free world interests and the speed and complexity of modern warfare have combined with political and resource constraints to produce today's airlift doctrine and force structure Airlift is the movement of goods and people to where they are needed when they are needed there Since the 1920s there has been an evolving awareness and articulation of how to best organize train and equip airlift forces for that mission The worldwide orientation of American foreign policy the numerous threats to free world interests and the speed and complexity of modern warfare have combined with political and resource constraints to produce today's airlift doctrine and force structure Colonel Miller's study traces these many interrelationships to discover what critical airlift decisions were made why they were made and what they may mean in the future Airlift is the backbone of deterrence A properly structured and equipped airlift force is critical to the successful execution of the national military strategy How we think about airlift and how we translate those thoughts into a meaningful expression of how to develop deploy and employ airlift forces is vital to the national defense Colonel Miller's study is a definitive step in that important process
