It slowly steals the minds of its victims, leading to memory loss, confusion, impaired judgment, personality changes, disorientation, and the inability to communicate. More than 5.4 million Americans are believed to have Alzheimer's disease, and by 2050, as the U.S. population ages, this number could increase to 13 million. There are nearly 35 million people living with dementia worldwide, and this number is likely to increase to more than 125 million by 2050.

If a person appears to be losing mental abilities to a degree that interferes with daily activities and social interactions, consult a doctor to determine if he or she is suffering from Alzheimer's disease or another form of dementia.

What are the stages of Alzheimer's disease?
