A First Language The Early Stages:

A First Language Roger Brown, 1973 For many years Roger Brown and his colleagues have studied the developing language of pre school children the language that ultimately will permit them to understand themselves and the world around them This longitudinal research project records the conversational performances of three children studying both semantic and grammatical aspects of their language development These core findings are related to recent work in psychology and linguistics and especially to studies of the acquisition of languages other than English including Finnish German Korean and Samoan Roger Brown has written the most exhaustive and searching analysis yet undertaken of the early stages of grammatical constructions and the meanings they convey The five stages of linguistic development Brown establishes are measured not by chronological age since children vary greatly in the speed at which their speech develops but by mean length of utterance This volume treats the first two stages Stage I is the threshold of syntax when children begin to combine words to make sentences These sentences Brown shows are always limited to the same small set of semantic relations nomination recurrence disappearance attribution possession agency and a few others Stage II is concerned with the modulations of basic structural meanings modulations for number time aspect specificity through the gradual acquisition of grammatical morphemes such as inflections prepositions articles and case markers Fourteen morphemes are studied in depth and it is shown that the order of their acquisition is almost identical across children and is predicted by their relative semantic and grammatical complexity It is ultimately the intent of this work to focus on the nature and development of knowledge knowledge concerning grammar and the meanings coded by grammar knowledge inferred from performance from sentences and the settings in which they are spoken and from signs of comprehension or incomprehension of sentences A

Semantics and Morphology of Early Adjectives in First Language Acquisition Sabrina Noccetti, Elena Tribushinina, Maria D. Voeikova, 2015-09-18 This book is about how toddlers learn their first adjectives such as for example red big and tasty Adjectives denote properties and enter child vocabularies later than words for objects such as apple and tree and actions such as eat and run probably due to lower frequencies in parental speech and greater conceptual complexity Adjective acquisition has received relatively little attention in child language research Furthermore cross linguistic studies of adjective learning are virtually non existent This book represents the first systematic analysis of how children learning typologically different languages acquire adjective form function and meaning The cross linguistic comparisons undertaken in the book provide valuable insights into universal and language specific aspects of language acquisition For each of the languages studied in this volume the development of adjective semantics is studied in tandem with the development of morphology by testing two hypotheses a the acquisition trajectory in the domain of adjectival morphology is determined by the typological properties of the target language b irrespective of the languages being acquired adjective learning is facilitated by universal conceptual mechanisms such as comparison and contrast

Language Acquisition Jill G. De Villiers, Peter A. De Villiers, 1978 The study of language acquisition has become a center of scientific inquiry into the nature of the human mind The result is a windfall of new information about language about learning and about children themselves In Language Acquisition Jill and Peter de Villiers provide a lively introduction to this fast growing field Their book deals centrally with the way the child acquires the sounds meanings and syntax of his language and the way he learns to use his language to communicate with others In discussing these issues the de Villiers provide a clear and insightful treatment of the classic questions about language acquisition Does the child show a genetic predisposition for speech or grammar or semantics which makes him uniquely able to learn human language What kinds of learning are involved in acquiring language and what kinds of experience with a language are necessary to support such learning Is there a critical period during the child's development which is optimal for language acquisition And what kind of psychological disabilities underlie the failure to acquire language
