Airlift And Airborne Operations In World War II:

Airlift and Airborne Operations in World War II Roger E. Bilstein, 2005-01-01 As World War II unfolded in Europe during the late 1930s and early 1940s U S military planners realized the nation s airlift and airborne combat capability was underdeveloped and out of date The U S Army Air Forces relied largely on civil airline equipment and personnel to launch the Air Transport Command s intercontinental routes to overseas combat zones A separate Troop Carrier Command and newly formed airborne divisions hammered out doctrinal concepts and tactical requirements for paratroop engagements Despite operational shortcomings subsequent airborne assaults in North Africa and Italy generated a base of knowledge from which to plan such massive aerial formations and paratroop drops as those for the Normandy invasion and Operation MARKET GARDEN and strategic efforts in the China Burma India theater Airlift routes over the Himalayas demonstrated one of the war s most effective uses of air transport The Air Transport Command emerged as a remarkably successful organization with thousands of aircraft and a global network of communications centers weather forecasting offices airfields and maintenance depots and air age realities influenced a postwar generation of dedicated military air transports operating around the world

Balkans The Assault on Europe OVERLORD MARKET GARDEN Bastogne and VARSITY Flying the Hump Other Far East Missions Legacies Suggested Reading Following the entry of the United States into World War I in the spring of 1917 the aviation units in the Signal Corps explored the possibilities of employing aircraft for military transport Although the 1916 Pershing Expedition into Mexico occasionally had used airplanes for reconnaissance and to carry mail and dispatches the equipment available during that operation proved unreliable In 1918 the Signal Corps supplied airplanes and pilots to inaugurate the first U S airmail service an operation expected to help train pilots and boost airplane production This experiment did little for either goal and the Post Office Department soon took complete control Overseas aircraft based in France sometimes carried a single officer or courier or perhaps priority military dispatches but the available single engine two place airplanes permitted little else An effort to assist a force of 500 U S soldiers surrounded by the Germans during the Argonne Forest campaign in October 1918 achieved very little Remembered as the Lost Battalion the American unit recovered almost none of the supplies that U S airplanes dropped near its position However the beleaguered troops surmised the need to mark their location for better identification from the air and the panels they laid out provided needed information to pinpoint their position and allow relief forces to fight through to them The object lesson of aerial marking became standard procedure United States Air Force History Publications Air Force History and Museums Program (U.S.),2000

American Military Aviation Charles Joseph Gross,2002 Discusses major developments in aircraft doctrine training and operations The author also provides discussions of airlife in flight refueling military budgets industry and inter service squabbling He deftly sketches the evolution of the air arms of each of the different services and provides clear analysis of military budgets Air University Review ,1986-05 Encyclopedia of World War II: A-C ,2005 An unprecedented achievement in publishing a multivolume encyclopedic resource for both the general reader and specialist on the central conflict of the 20th century The encyclopedia of World War II covers the entire scope of the Second World War from its earliest roots to its continuing impact on global politics and human society United States Army in World War II.: The European theater of operations ,1953 The MAC Flyer ,1984 Air University Library Index to Military Periodicals ,1990 Professional Journal of the United States Army ,1951 The U.S. Army Air Forces in World War II. , American Military Transport Aircraft Since 1925 E.R. Johnson,2013-04-23 Without the support of airlift the modern American military machine would be brought to a standstill Since World War II beginning with the Cold War and continuing up to the present day the U S armed forces have come increasingly to rely upon airlift for mobility The power to rapidly move and thereafter support a military operation anywhere in the world at any time has become a foundational element of American defense policy This work provides the reader with a comprehensive historical survey including technical specifications drawings and photographs of each type of fixed wing aircraft used by U S military forces over a nearly 90 year period to carry out the airlift mission Handbook on the Soviet Army United States.
