Alec Clifton-Taylor's Buildings of Delight Alec Clifton-Taylor,1988 Buildings of Delight Alec Clifton-Taylor,2000

The Early History of Railway Tunnels Hubert Pragnell,2024-08-30 To the early railway traveller the prospect of travelling to places in hours rather than days hitherto was an inviting prospect however a journey was not without its fears as well as excitement To some the prospect of travelling through a tunnel without carriage lighting with smoke permeating the compartment and the confined noise was a horror of the new age What might happen if we broke down or crashed into another train in the darkness To others it was exciting with the light from the footplate flickering against the tunnel walls or spotting the occasional glimpses of light from a ventilation shaft To the directors of early railway companies planning a route was governed by expense and the most direct way Avoiding hills could add miles but tunnelling through them could involve vast expense as the Great Western Railway found at Box and the London and Birmingham at Kilsby Creating a cutting as an alternative was also costly not only in labour and time but also in compensation for landowners who opposed railways on visual and social grounds having seen their land divided by canals Construction involved millions of bricks or blocks of stone for sufficiently thick walls to withstand collapse However the entrance barely seen from the carriage window might be an impressive Italianate arch as at Primrose Hill or a castellated portal worthy of the Middle Ages as at Bramhope This book sets out to tell the story of tunnelling in Britain up to about 1870 when it was a question of burrowing through earth and rock with spade and explosive powder with the constant danger of collapse or flooding leading to injury and death It uses contemporary accounts from the dangers of railway travel by Dickens to the excitement of being drawn through the Liverpool Wapping Tunnel by the young composer Mendelssohn It includes descriptions from early railway company guide books newspapers and diaries It also includes numerous photographs and colored architectural elevations from railway archives

The Architectural Review ,1986-07 Ham Hill Richard Durman,2006 Describes the complex but fascinating geology of building stones in easily understood terms the traditional use of Ham Hill Stone through much of Wessex and the South West and practical problems of transportation before the railways allowed it to travel further afield This book includes important conservation issues and illustrations Southern History ,1988 Buildings of Delight Clifton-Taylor,1986 The

The Mental Life of the Architectural Historian Gevork Hartoonian, 2014-08-11 Starting with the question concerning the discursive formation of architectural history the chapters compiled in this book attempt to re read the historiography of early modern architecture from the point of view of the theoretical work produced since the post war era Central to the objectives of the argument are the ways in which firstly architectural history differs from the traditions of art history and secondly that the historical narrative works its autonomy through theoretical representation the discursive flow of which is interrupted by the historian's urge to support arguments with references to buildings texts drawings and historical events The historians discussed in this volume are those regularly addressed by most critics revisiting modern architectural history Individual chapters are dedicated to N Pevsner H R Hitchcock and S Giedion an economy of selection that is formative for a critical understanding of the canon established by these historians Themes such as periodization autonomy and time are discussed and the coda of the final chapter expands on the scope of critical historiography popularised by Kenneth Frampton and Manfredo Tafuri
