What is our best present understanding of good school leadership? How do I lead my school to make it relevant to students of the 21st century? The idea for this book grew out of an international conference organized by the National College for School Leadership. An international future learning from best practice worldwide which explored innovative and significant aspects of educational leadership and brought together international colleagues to generate new understandings. The conference proved a dynamic forum for debate for researchers, academics, policy makers and practitioners. It was clear at the conference that there was a consensus of understanding around certain key themes that crossed national boundaries. In Developing Leadership, well known international contributors explore this consensus to promote the key themes which reflect our best present understanding of good school leadership and to inform school leaders about leading edge thinking which bears on their role. These key ideas which are highlighted at various points throughout the book are built around professional learning communities, distributed leadership, strategic thinking about ICT, sustainability, internship, mentoring and coaching.

Cities can be seen as geographical imaginaries; places have meanings attributed so that they are perceived, represented and interpreted in a particular way. We may therefore speak of cityness rather than the city; the city is always in the making. It cannot be grasped as a fixed structure in which people find their lives and is never stable through agents designing courses of interactions with geographical imaginations. This theoretical perspective on cities is currently reshaping the field of urban studies, requiring new forms of theory, comparisons and methods. Meanwhile, mainstream urban studies approaches neighbourhoods as fixed social spatial units producing effects on groups of residents. Yet they have not convincingly shown empirically that the neighbourhood is an entity generating effects rather than being the statistical aggregate where effects can be measured. This book challenges this common understanding and argues for an approach that sees neighbourhood effects as the outcome of processes of marginalisation and exclusion that find spatial expressions in the city elsewhere. It does so through a comparative study of an unusual kind: Sub-Saharan Africans, second generation Turkish and Lebanese girls and alcohol and drug consumers, some of them homeless, arguably some of the most disadvantaged categories in the German capital Berlin, in inner city neighbourhoods and middle class families in owner occupied housing. This book analyses urban inequalities through the lens of the city in the making where neighbourhood comes to play a role at some times in some practices and at some moments but is not the point of departure.

Albright, Marian Albright Schenck, 1999 Two men played a crucial role in the creation and early history of the National Park Service Stephen T Mather a public relations genius of sweeping vision and Horace M Albright an able lawyer and administrator who helped transform that vision into reality In Creating the National Park Service Albright and his daughter Marian Albright Schenck reveal the previously untold story of the critical missing years in the history of the service During this period 1917 and 1918 Mather's problems with manic depression were kept hidden from public view and Albright his able and devoted assistant served as acting director and assumed Mather's responsibilities Albright played a decisive part in the passage of the National Park Service Organic Act of 1916 the formulation of principles and policies for management of the parks the defense of the parks against exploitation by ranchers lumber companies and mining interests during World War I and other issues crucial to the future of the fledgling park system This authoritative behind the scenes history sheds light on the early days of the most popular of all federal agencies while painting a vivid picture of American life in the early twentieth century

Creating the Opportunity to Learn A. Wade Boykin, Pedro Noguera, 2011-09-22 Unless we believe that those who have more are inherently superior to those who have less we should be troubled by the fact that patterns of achievement are often fairly predictable particularly with respect to students race and class In Creating the Opportunity to Learn Wade Boykin and Pedro Noguera help navigate the turbid waters of evidence based methodologies and chart a course toward closing and eliminating the academic achievement gap Turning a critical eye to current and recent research the authors present a comprehensive view of the achievement gap and advocate for strategies that contribute to the success of all children Boykin and Noguera maintain that it is possible to close the achievement gap by abandoning failed strategies learning from successful schools and simply doing more of what the research shows is most effective Success is founded on equity but equity involves more than simply ensuring students have equal access to education equity also entails a focus on outcomes and results If we want to bring about significant improvements in those outcomes we have to do more to address the context in which learning takes place In short we must create schools where a child s race or class is no longer a predictor for how well he or she might perform
