Discovery and Explanation in Biology and Medicine Kenneth F. Schaffner, 1993 Kenneth F Schaffner compares the practice of biological and medical research and shows how traditional topics in philosophy of science such as the nature of theories and of explanation can illuminate the life sciences While Schaffner pays some attention to the conceptual questions of evolutionary biology his chief focus is on the examples that immunology human genetics neuroscience and internal medicine provide for examinations of the way scientists develop examine test and apply theories Although traditional philosophy of science has regarded scientific discovery the questions of creativity in science as a subject for psychological rather than philosophical study Schaffner argues that recent work in cognitive science and artificial intelligence enables researchers to rationally analyze the nature of discovery As a philosopher of science who holds an M D he has examined biomedical work from the inside and uses detailed examples from the entire range of the life sciences to support the semantic approach to scientific theories addressing whether there are laws in the life sciences as there are in the physical sciences Schaffner s novel use of philosophical tools to deal with scientific research in all of its complexity provides a distinctive angle on basic questions of scientific evaluation and explanation

Scientific Discovery: Case Studies Thomas Nickles, 2012-12-06 The history of science is articulated by moments of discovery Yet these moments are not simple or isolated events in science Just as a scientific discovery illuminates our understanding of nature or of society and reveals new connections among phenomena so too does the history of scientific activity and the analysis of scientific reasoning illuminate the processes which give rise to moments of discovery and the complex network of consequences which follow upon such moments Understanding discovery has not been until recently a major concern of modern philosophy of science Whether the act of discovery was regarded as mysterious and inexplicable or obvious and in no need of explanation modern philosophy of science in effect bracketed the question It concentrated instead on the logic of scientific explanation or on the issues of validation or justification of scientific theories or laws The recent revival of interest in the context of discovery indeed in the acts of discovery on the part of philosophers and historians of science represents no one particular methodological or philosophical orientation It proceeds as much from an empiricist and analytical approach as from a sociological or historical one from considerations of the logic of science as much as from the allogical or extralogical contexts of scientific thought and practice But in general this new interest focuses sharply on the actual historical and contemporary cases of scientific discovery and on an examination of the act or moment of discovery in situ
