Biotechnology for the Treatment of Hazardous Waste Daphne L. Stoner, 2017-11-22 The development of biologically based processes for the treatment of hazardous inorganic and organic wastes is a multi disciplinary effort requiring the consideration of a number of biological chemical and physical parameters as well as the effective teaming of biologists chemists engineers and regulatory agencies This new text reference bridges the disciplines in a unique way allowing an exchange of fundamental information to take place The book begins with a description of the biological transformations of inorganic and organic compounds and a review of strategies that may be used for the treatment of hazardous wastes It continues with a discussion of the physiological and engineering factors that must be considered for successful process development and concludes with a discussion of the regulations that have influenced biological waste treatment and environmental remediation

Environmental Biotechnology for Waste Treatment Gary S. Sayler, Robert Fox, James Blackburn, 2013-11-11 The use of biotechnical processes in control of environmental pollution and in hazardous waste treatment is viewed as an advantageous alternative or adduct to physical chemical treatment technologies Yet the development and implementation of both conventional and advanced biotechnologies in predictable and efficacious field applications suffer from numerous technical regulatory and societal uncertainties With the application of modern molecular biology and genetic engineering there is clear potential for biotechnical developments that will lead to breakthroughs in controlled and optimized hazardous waste treatment for in situ and unit process use There is however great concern that the development of these technologies may be needlessly hindered in their applications and that the fundamental research base may not be able to sustain continued technology development Some of these issues have been discussed in a fragmented fashion within the research and development community A basic research agenda has been established to promote a sustainable cross disciplinary technology base This agenda includes
