Biodiversity Evaluation Tools For European Forests Ecological B:

Ecological Bulletins, Targets and Tools for the Maintenance of Forest Biodiversity Per Angelstam, Monica Donz-Breuss, Jean-Michel Roberge, 2009-05-06 Maintaining forest biodiversity by combining protection management and restoration of forest and woodland landscapes is a central component of sustainable development Evidence that there are threshold levels for how much habitat loss may be tolerated for viable populations of specialised species to be maintained Policy makers businesses and managers pose questions about how to balance use of renewable forest resources and conserve biodiversity Examples are presented on how biodiversity assessments can be made Proposes how the critical gaps in our knowledge identified throughout the book could be filled through macroecological research and international co operation

Forest Biodiversity Indicators in the Nordic Countries Jøgeir N. Stokland, 2003 Engineering Tools for Environmental Risk Management Katalin Gruiz, Tamas Meggyes, Eva Fenyvesi, 2014-08-08 This is the first volume of the five volume book series Engineering Tools for Environmental Risk Management dealing with the following topics types and management of environmental deterioration particularly pollution environmental toxicology as a versatile tool in monitoring and risk management risk assessment of chemical substances and c Advances in Forest Inventory for Sustainable Forest Management and Biodiversity Monitoring Piermaria Corona, Michael Köhl, Marco Marchetti, 2013-04-17 Forests represent a remnant wilderness of high recreational value in the densely populated industrial societies a threatened natural resource in some regions of the world and a renewable reservoir of essential raw materials for the wood processing industry In June 1992 the United Nations Conference on the Environment and Development UNCED in Rio de Janeiro initiated a world wide process of negotiation with the aim of ensuring sustainable management conservation and development of forest resources Although there seems to be unanimous support for sustainable development from all quarters there is no generally accepted set of indicators which allows comparisons to be made between a given situation and a desirable one In a recent summary paper prepared by the FAO Forestry and Planning Division Ljungman et al 1999 find that forest resources continue to diminish while being called upon to produce a greater range of goods and services and that calls for sustainable forest management will simply go unheeded if the legal policy and administrative environment do not effectively control undesirable practices Does the concept of sustainable forest management represent not much more than a magic formula for achieving consensus a vague idea which makes it difficult to match action to rhetoric The concept of sustainable forest management is likely to remain an imprecise one but we can contribute to avoiding management practices that are clearly unsustainable Farming, Forestry and the Natural Heritage Scottish Natural Heritage, 2006-07-27 There have been significant changes to farming and forestry and new strategies for agriculture forestry and biodiversity have been launched The influence of farming and forestry on Scotland s landscapes is seen as increasingly important and new access rights have been put in place by the Land Reform Scotland Act 2003 Although these changes bring uncertainty and challenges they also bring a major opportunity to move decisively towards integrating landscape biodiversity and recreational objectives in land management This book takes stock of the changes taking place and considers a number of case studies which together suggest that progress is being made looks ahead at future research and advisory needs and highlights some key challenges to achieving better integration in the future

High-level Pan-European Conference on Agriculture and Biodiversity Council of Europe. Council for the Pan-European Strategy for Biological and Landscape Diversity, 2005-01-01 This publication contains a number of reports prepared for a high level conference on issues relating to biological and landscape diversity in European agricultural policies held in Paris in June 2002 The conference made recommendations to states and relevant organisations and provided input to policy work and programmes within the framework of the Convention on Biological Diversity the Ministerial Conference on Environment for Europe the Convention to Combat Desertification and the EU s Common Agricultural Policy and national policy developments

Ecological Bulletins, Biodiversity Evaluation Tools for European Forests, 2001-02-14 The Biodiversity Evaluation Tools BETs for European forest presented in this report are the outcome of a pan European project BEAR bringing together expertise from 27 European research organisations The main achievements are a common scheme of key factors of biodiversity applicable to European forests European level Forest Types for Biodiversity Assessment and a list of potential biodiversity indicators to assess forest biodiversity Furthermore the report gives general advice for European and national level assessment and monitoring of forest biodiversity The BETs for European forest will hopefully help to develop both the policy framework for conserving European forests as well as the operational level management

Plantation Forests and Biodiversity: Oxymoron or Opportunity? Eckehard G. Brockerhoff, Hervé Jactel, John A. Parrotta, Chris P. Quine, Jeffrey Sayer, David Leslie Hawksworth, 2010-07-23 1 Plantation forests and biodiversity Oxymoron or opportunity Forests form the natural vegetation over much of the Earth s land and they are critical for the survival of innumerable organisms The ongoing loss of natural forests which in some regions may have taken many millennia to develop is one of the main reasons for the decline of biodiversity Preventing the further destruction of forests and protecting species and ecosystems within forests have become central issues for environmental agencies forest managers and governments In this difficult task science has an important role in informing policy and management as to how to go about this So how do industrial and other plantation forests fit into this Plantation forests comprised of rows of planted trees that may be destined for pulp or sawmills after only a few years of growth appear to have little to contribute to the conservation of biodiversity Yet there is more to this than meets the eye of the casual observer and there are indeed numerous opportunities and often untapped potential for biodiversity conservation in plantation forestry With plantation forests expanding at a rate of approximately three million hectares per year it is crucial to understand how plantations can make a positive contribution to biodiversity conservation and how the potentially negative impacts of this land use can be minimised That is the topic of this book for many people is that forests are just a collection of trees. However, they are much more than that. They are a complex functional system of interacting and often interdependent biological, physical, and chemical components. The biological part of which has evolved to perpetuate itself. This complexity produces combinations of climate, soils, trees, and plant species unique to each site, resulting in hundreds of different forest types around the world. Logically, trees are an important component for the research in forest ecosystems, but the wide variety of other life forms and abiotic components in most forests means that other elements such as wildlife or soil nutrients should also be the focal point in ecological studies and management plans to be carried out in forest ecosystems. In this book, the readers can find the latest research related to forest ecosystems, but with a different twist. The research described here is not just on trees and is focused on the other components, structures, and functions that are usually overshadowed by the focus on trees but are equally important to maintain the diversity, function, and services provided by forests. The first section of this book explores the structure and biodiversity of forest ecosystems, whereas the second section reviews the research done on ecosystem structure and functioning. The third and last section explores the issues related to forest management as an ecosystem-level activity, all of them from the perspective of the other parts of a forest.

Forestry and Biodiversity Fred L. Bunnell, Glen B. Dunsworth, 2010-01-01 Sustainable management is a problem for countries that depend on natural resources. Forests contain much of the world's biodiversity and offer significant renewable resources with a potentially small ecological and carbon footprint. Yet as global demand for forest products increases, conserving biodiversity has become more urgent and challenging. Forestry and Biodiversity makes the case for adaptive management, a structured approach to learning by doing to sustain biodiversity in managed forests. It draws on the theory and principles of conservation biology and forest ecology and illustrates them and the challenges they pose through a practical, real-world study of a 1.1 million hectare commercial operation in a coastal temperate rainforest. National Forest Inventories: Contributions to Forest Biodiversity Assessments Gherardo Chirici, Susanne Winter, Ronald E.

McRoberts, 2011-01-04 Forest biodiversity is crucial to the ecological, economic, and social well-being of earth's civilisations. Unfortunately, however, forest biodiversity is threatened to a serious degree in nearly all countries. Therefore, many countries have agreed to be parties to international agreements focused on maintaining, restoring, and monitoring biodiversity. Further, these countries have agreed to report to international bodies on forest biodiversity status and trends. NFIs are the primary source of large-scale information available for this purpose, but the large variety of definitions, protocols, sampling designs, and plot configurations used by NFIs makes comparable international reporting extremely difficult. This book presents the results of Working Group 3 of COST Action E43 in the development of harmonization techniques for common reporting of estimates of forest biodiversity indicators using NFI data. Harmonization tests were carried out on a large common data base containing raw NFI data from 13 European countries and the USA. With its collection of practical examples for the estimation of forest biodiversity indicators, it's a practical tool for anyone involved in forest inventories and in forest resource monitoring and management as well as for those involved in biodiversity assessment and reporting

Biodiversity evaluation tools for European forests Tor-Björn Larsson, Andrej Bončina, Jurij Diaci, 2000 Towards Forest Sustainability David Lindenmayer, 2003 A collection of practical essays on modern forest management authored by ten of the world's leading forest ecologists and managers from around the globe Each essay provides real world insights into the transition to forest sustainability in their own country Conference PanEuropeenne a Haut Niveau Sur L'agriculture Et la Biodiversite Biologique Et Paysagere, Pour Une Agriculture Durable en Europe : Actes Council of Europe, 2003-01-01 The Carpathians: Integrating Nature and Society Towards Sustainability Jacek Kozak, Katarzyna Ostapowicz, Andrzej Bytnerowicz, Bartłomiej Wyżga, 2013-04-15 The book includes a broad spectrum of perspectives from different scientific disciplines both the natural and social sciences as well as practical knowledge It gives a new insight into the Carpathian mountain region The Last Large Intact Forests in Northwest Russia Tor Kristian Spidsø, Ole Jakob Sørensen, 2009 The forests of Fennoscandia have been in human use for many purposes for centuries and through the last decades industrialized and cultivated in a manner that can change their ecological function with respect to biodiversity at species and ecosystem levels In Northwest Russia we can still find large indigenous forests where human impact is low They represent the last intact western taiga ecosystems of high value for biodiversity preservation in Russia and Fennoscandia as reservoirs and source habitats for future dispersal of taiga species The Conference and Workshop in Steinkjer 2007 focused on these matters but also the ecological importance of these forests for rural culture socio economic importance industrial values and how protection and sustainable societies could go hand in hand Many of the presentations given at the conference and workshop are here presented together with the Summary and Closing Statement worked out at the end of the sessions The presentations cover many aspects from ecology history and culture conservation and management strategies inventory tools for defining habitats of specific value to biodiversity as well as implementation of environmental issues into the forestry laws and certification and educational tools for developing sustainable societies in a broad scale

Environmental Horticulture Ross Cameron, James Hitchmough, 2016-03-24 Environmental horticulture also referred to as landscape horticulture and amenity horticulture is the umbrella term for the horticulture that we encounter in our daily lives This includes parks botanic gardens sports facilities landscape gardens roundabouts cemeteries shopping centres any public space which has grass planting and trees This book reflects contemporary thinking and is supported by scientific evidence to show the role value and application of horticulture in the landscape The discipline of environmental horticulture its importance and impact on the wider environment is explored in the first part whilst the second part covers practical horticultural management of different categories of environmental horticulture

Assessment of Biodiversity for Improved Forest Planning Peter Bachmann, Michael Köhl, Risto Päivinen, 2013-04-17 The Global Biodiversity Strategy signed in 1992 in Rio de Janeiro and the resolutions at the Ministerial Conferences on the Protection of Forests in Europe in Strasbourg 1990 and Helsinki 1993 commit the signatory states to monitor nationally the state of biodiversity and to sustain the characteristic natural variation in the country Sustainability and long term planning are the two terms best describing the philosophy of traditional forest management practices However the traditional planning techniques are not primarily developed to maintain sustainability of biodiversity The gap between the international commitments and the practices in forest assessment and management is obvious This publication presents experience in methodology for assessing and monitoring the variation of ecosystems and habitats in relation to biodiversity conservation and for integrating biodiversity in regional planning of forest management and land use The state of the art in the field of natural resource assessments with special reference to forest biodiversity is reviewed progress in integrating data on biodiversity in forest management planning is presented and the information needs regarding biodiversity conservation and the question to what degree assessment methods for forest biodiversity can be simplified for practical applications are discussed The book is intended for researchers and practitioners in the field of forest and environmental planning and environmental policies

Forest Quality Nigel Dudley, Rodolphe Schlaepfer, William Jackson, Jean-Paul Jeanrenaud, Sue Stolton, 2012-04-27 Deforestation is frequently a topic of discussion in the environmental arena but it is not just the number of trees that matters the quality of the forest is also important Even where the forest area is stable or increasing there are often rapid changes in its character Natural forests are being replaced by plantations or by intensively managed forests Around the world forests are becoming younger and less diverse in both species and structure this has important impacts for biodiversity and also affects many human values In this groundbreaking text forest quality is discussed as a useful new concept in forest conservation and management Three main assessment criteria are used authenticity environmental benefits and social and economic benefits The book describes a methodology and protocol for collecting and analysing data and outlines in detail the approach required with each indicator The authors advocate a landscape approach to assessment and demonstrate how assessment works through a series of case studies that show how this approach can be used in many ways to help forest conservation management This hands on manual is for professionals involved in forestry conservation and resource management worldwide and contains case study material from Europe Asia Africa and Latin America that demonstrates practical uses of the new landscape approach to forest conservation Published with IUCN and WWF
