

Biological Monitoring of Exposures

- Biological monitoring attempts to estimate the internal dose of a chemical exposure.
- Internal dose is dependent on the:
 - Amount of chemical recently absorbed
 - Amount of chemicals stored in the whole body
 - Amount of chemical bound to critical sites of action
- Advantage: All routes of exposure assessed and provides a more accurate assessment of health risk than atmospheric monitoring

Environmental Impact Assessment B.D. Clark,A. Gilad,R. Bisset,P. Tomlinson,2012-12-06 The experience of highly industrialized countries demonstrates that single minded pursuit of economic develop ment is self defeating because by disregarding the other components of what is cxmnonly called the quality of life it creates conditions which are not acceptable to large sectors of the population In the recent past a number of projects for example major darns have had unexpectedly deleterious social enviro nmental and health consequences As a result many govern ment department and agencies are investigating the impacts of specific projects and are examining the role impact analysis could play in project planning The process of environmental impact analysis has been developed tested and institutionalized in several countries The objective of the process is a prior identification and definition of likely environmental impacts of projects such as public works industrial developments and tourist develop ments as well as the impact of policies and legislative proposals The environmental impact analysis process also includes the definition of alternative courses of action which would achieve comparable economic objectives while eliminatir g some or all of the detrimental environmental consequences Identification of preventive or precautionary measures which would minimize the unavoidable impacts fonn an integral part of the process The aim should be for a balanced appraisal in which economic technical social environmental and health aspects are fully evaluated Thus viewed environmental impact analysis emerges as one of the most powerful planning tools for the prevention of environmental pollution and degradation

Use of Biomarkers in Assessing Health and Environmental Impacts of Chemical Pollutants

Curtis C. Travis, 2013-11-11 Biological markers biomarkers are useful tools for understanding the nature and extent of human exposure and risk from environmental toxicants Biomarkers are classified into three basic categories exposure effect or susceptibility A marker of exposure is the product of the interaction between a target cell or molecule and a foreign substance NAS 1989 These markers can be used to determine the biologically effective dose necessary to elicit a particular physiological change in an organism A marker of effect is a biochemical or physiological change in an organism that can predict the onset of adverse health effects resulting from a given exposure Lastly markers of susceptibility act as indicators of an inherent or acquired tendency of an organism to experience an adverse health effect NAS 1989 These markers are already used to detect a variety of diseases and show great promise for developing a better understanding of the mechanisms of disease Additionally biomarkers can be used to establish a more rational basis for quantitative risk extrapolation between species as well as to obtain more precise estimates of the time of critical exposure These markers can also prove helpful in identifying potentially damaging exposures before the onset of adverse health effects Biomarkers serve as a valuable exposure assessment tool because they take into account exposure from all routes and integrate exposure from all sources They have the potential to yield better risk estimates than current monitoring and modeling protocols In June 1992 Dr Travis and Dr
