Academic and Research Literacy Practices of Final Year Teacher Trainees in Luanda, Angola Celeste Sambeny, 2016-06-22 Academic and Research Literacy Practices of Final Year Teacher Trainees in Luanda Angola presents a detailed study of students and lecturers at higher teacher training institutions where English is taught as a medium of instruction and specialisation As such the book will help raise the awareness of educators teachers and supervisors of the need to be more supportive to students and will highlight the importance of increased responsibility on the part of the students regarding their studies especially during the process of writing their research reports Practical experience has shown that in most classrooms students are typically asked to produce texts for one single audience namely the teacher or the lecturer who already knows what constitutes an acceptable response However in many classrooms teachers and lecturers tend to believe that literacy can be defined as the ability to encode and decode texts the ability to decipher the main idea of a reading passage or to write a text that obeys the general conventions of language usage such as syntax organisation and idea development The central argument of this book however is that at higher levels of the educational system in Angola academic and research literacy practices are at best questionable and at worst harmful An extensive re evaluation of assumptions regarding student capability and what it means to be a literate in the twenty first century information society is of critical importance Such a re examination allows for extensive reflection on current practices and a powerful critique of traditional academic and research literacy methods and suggests ways in which practices of quality teaching and learning may be implemented

Discourse on the Move Douglas Biber, 2007 Discourse on the Move is the first book length exploration of how corpus based methods can be used for discourse analysis applied to the description of discourse organization The primary goal is to bring these two analytical perspectives together undertaking a detailed discourse analysis of each individual text but doing so in terms that can be generalized across all texts of a corpus The book explores two major approaches to this task top down and bottom up In the top down approach the functional components of a genre are determined first and then all texts in a corpus are analyzed in terms of those components In contrast textual components emerge from the corpus analysis in the bottom up approach and the discourse organization of individual texts is then analyzed in terms of linguistically defined textual categories Both approaches are illustrated through case studies of discourse structure in particular genres fund raising letters biology biochemistry research articles and university classroom teaching

Bioethics in Cultural Contexts Christoph Rehmann-Sutter, Marcus Düwell, Dietmar Mieth, 2006-03-08
CHRISTOPH REHMANN SUTTER MARCUS D WELL DIETMAR MIETH When we placed finitude limits of human existence as a motto over a round of discussion on biomedicine and bioethics which led to this collection of essays we did not know how far this would lead us into methodological quandaries However we felt intuitively that an interdisciplinary approach including social and cultural sciences would have an advantage over a solely disciplinary philosophical or theological analysis Bioethics if it is to have adequate discriminatory power should include sensitivity to the cultural contexts of biomedicine and also to the cultural contexts of bioethics itself Context awareness of course is not foreign to philosophical or theological bioethics for the simple reason that the issues tackled in the debates as in other fields of ethics could not be adequately understood outside their contexts Moral issues are always accompanied by contexts When we try to unpack them which is necessary to make them accessible to ethical discussion we are regularly confronted with the fact that in removing too much of the context we do not clarify an issue but make it less comprehensible The context at least some essential parts of it is intrinsic to the issue

Unpacking in ethics is therefore a different procedure It does not mean peeling the context off but rather identifying which contextual elements are essential for an understanding of the key moral aspects of the issue and explaining how they establish its particular character

The Context of Medicines in Developing Countries Sjaak van der Geest, Susan Whyte, 1988-10-31 Western pharmaceuticals are flooding the Third World Injections capsules and tablets are available in city markets and village shops from traditional practitioners and street vendors as well as from more orthodox sources like hospitals Although many are aware of this pharmaceutical invasion little has been written about how local people perceive and use these products This book is a first attempt to remedy that situation It presents studies of the ways Western medicines are circulated and understood in the cities and rural areas of Africa Asia and Latin America We feel that such a collection is long overdue for two reasons The first is a practical one people dealing with health problems in developing countries need information about local situations and they need examples of methods they can use to examine the particular contexts in which they are working We hope that this book will be useful for pharmacists doctors nurses health planners policy makers and concerned citizens who are interested in the realities of drug use Why do people want various kinds of medicine How do they evaluate and choose them and how do they obtain them The second reason for these studies of medicines is to fill a need in medical anthropology as a field of study Here we address our colleagues in anthropology medical sociology and related disciplines
