Hennessy, 2006-08-12 It is an exciting time to be an artist and artist educator Networks of schools and artists are being motivated by arts partnerships a relatively new phenomenon in a field which whilst disparate in its character and practice is marked by a common intention to respond effectively and critically to politically driven agendas of accountability school improvement and pupil attainment More than ever artists and educators alike have begun to realise the need to develop practices which offer the development of artist educator pedagogies as agencies for change and political action

Understanding the function of reflective practice the conditions which support it and its impact on learning are addressed throughout this book We hope that the book will motivate readers with a diversity of interests and needs to engage in reflections of their own professional practices and of the practices of the communities in which they work This book is about reflection The thesis about the field it covers and major premise of this book is that reflection matters at every turn in arts engagement and even more so in educational settings where artist educators share a passion for facilitating and understanding the how of learners engagement with particular art forms It aims to show ways in which reflection can inform and transform practice in terms of what when and how reflection is embodied in arts engagement Open Education

Pauline M. Rothstein, Vira C. Hinds, 1977 Music Education in England, 1950-2010 John Finney, 2016-04-22 John Finney examines the child centred progressive tradition to create a fresh way of evaluating ideas and practices that have evolved since 1950 that have shaped the lives of music teachers and their pupils and that have now become disfigured residual and altogether lost in the light of social cultural and political change The book is a critique of the present situation with an intention to expose the dangers in our current pursuit of future gains that are thought to serve the making and sustaining of the social order The project draws in major debates of the period along with their protagonists counter pointed by the voices of teachers and pupils At the same time the structuring voices of policy and governance become ever louder as we reach the present time Finney presents a compelling analytical account through a series of six episodes each seeking to capture the spirit and fervour characteristic of a particular phase within the period studied In the concluding chapter the narrative developed is reviewed From this the idea of music education as an ethical pursuit is proposed Finney argues that classroom relationships can be thought of as playfully dialogic where teacher and pupil remain curious and where there is serious attention to what is to be taught and why This will always need to be negotiated with the expressed and inferred needs of children working together to find a critical approach to what is being learnt Finney's book provides fresh inspiration for practitioners and new challenges for researchers and as such is a landmark in the field of arts and music education
