Sullivan,2023-11-15 This first full length account of the Darby School of Art overturns Philadelphia s long held unwarranted reputation and demonstrates that Philadelphia was a hub of avant garde painting in the early twentieth century This first full length account of the Darby School of Art overturns Philadelphia s long held unwarranted reputation as artistically stodgy unwilling and unable to embrace Impressionism post Impressionist and abstract art and demonstrates that Philadelphia was more avant garde in the early twentieth century than previously thought This is the story of an almost completely forgotten summer art school that flourished first in Darby PA and then in Fort Washington PA between 1898 and 1918 The Darby School of Art was founded and operated by Thomas Anshutz and Hugh Breckenridge two artists who taught during the academic year at the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts Anshutz and Breckenridge brought a lot of new ideas about painting back to Philadelphia after their European sojourns and introduced those ideas to a public that was initially not very responsive to Impressionism Post Impressionism and semi abstract art But an appreciation for modern styles of painting began to slowly grow among Philadelphia artists and collectors and Anshutz and Breckenridge were in the forefront of this development They also sympathized with what some have called the New Woman movement which backed women who wanted to pursue careers outside of the home In this new history expert Mark Sullivan argues that the Philadelphia area was a genuine hub of avant garde painting in the early twentieth century even though it has earned the reputation of lagging far behind New York City in its openness to new styles of painting It also discusses how the Darby School should be recognized as an institution that got behind the idea of women as professional artists at a time when that concept was quite radical     Art and Politics Sarah Jennings, 2009-04-15 Short listed for the Ottawa Book Awards 2010 This is the story of the creation and first four decades of one of Canada's pre eminent cultural organizations While it documents the history of Canada's National Arts Centre in Ottawa it also tells the story of the arts in Canada from the 1960s to 2006 The story breaks down into three parts the years of creation and early growth fuelled by the talent and resources generated by Canada's 1967 Centennial celebration the turbulent middle years marked by a dearth of funds and political disinterest and finally the renaissance when the decision is made to restore and recast the organization to provide continuing benefit to the performing arts in Canada's capital and the country at large Written in a documentary style moving from episode to episode the story is enriched by the personal memories of those who participated in it including the leading artists managers officials and politicians who were involved
