The Art of Tracey Emin Mandy Merck, Chris Townsend, Tracey Emin, 2002 The career of Tracey Emin one of the best known contemporary British artists has become a potent symbol of the relationship between art and celebrity in our time When it was exhibited in London at the Tate in 1999 her now notorious installation My Bed was denounced by conservative critics as a national scandal but this and her other work have continued to attract ever larger audiences Whether storming drunkenly out of live television debates talking tearfully about her abortions or modeling evening gowns for Vivienne Westwood Tracey Emin makes headlines Yet if Emin is now universally recognized as a media phenomenon her work has also begun to attract serious critical attention In The Art of Tracey Emin distinguished critics from Britain and the United States address her achievement in depth for the first time tracing Emin's influences from Egon Schiele to Judy Chicago and establishing her place in a larger tradition of postmodern and feminist art Adopting a variety of critical approaches contributors explore the full range of Emin's work from photography and monoprints to installation art and videos showing that however raw and personal it may seem to be it actually represents a carefully meditated response to vital issues in contemporary culture and society

Regarded as one of the world's leading contemporary artists Tracey Emin born 1963 has gained international acclaim for her blunt personal and revealing style which elicits a broad spectrum of emotions ranging from shock to empathy to self reflection. Drawing on personal experience Emin often reveals painful situations with brutal honesty and poetic humor. I Followed You to the Sun features a very personal collection of works titled the Lonely Chair drawings which are published here for the first time. In this series of self portraits Emin depicts a solitary female in her signature gestural style. The images are drawn from photographs that Emin took of herself and convey poignant emotions of longing and sadness.
