

A LEGEND REBORN

By the mid 1990's continually escalating maintenance costs and new marine safety requirements were threatening Waverley's long-term future. The prospect of significant Heritage Lottery Fund support persuaded Waverley's owners to formulate plans to rebuild the vessel to "as new" condition, restoring much of her original character but, at the same time, meeting modern safety standards.

On the 50th Anniversary of the Waverley's first sailing, 16th June 1997, the Heritage Lottery Fund announced a £2.7m grant in support of the rebuild of the vessel. Significant funding was also provided by the PSPS, the European Regional Development Fund and various local councils and Enterprise Companies in the west of Scotland.

The work was carried out in two stages over the winters 1999-2000 (phase one) and 2002-2003 (phase two) and the majority of the work was carried at George Prior Engineering shipyard on the River Yare.

HERITAGE REBUILD PHASE ONE 2000

During the first half of 2000, Waverley was stripped bare of her funnels, paddle wheels, paddleboxes and sponsons, triple expansion engine and Steambloc boiler.

Phase one of the rebuild focused on the aft end of Waverley, including the installation of two new boilers, electrical generators, refurbishment of the passenger areas to 1940's style, replacement of her funnels and aft deck house to aluminium, as well as the incorporation of new UK and EU Marine Safety requirements including life saving gear, fire prevention equipment and equipment to meet new environmental requirements.

The first phase of the rebuild was completed in early August 2000 and after sea trials, Waverley repositioned to Glasgow via the north of the UK whilst picking up fuel and water at Aberdeen and Kyle of Lochalsh. Waverley operated for 10 days on her native Clyde and completed the rest of her sailing season on the South Coast and the Thames.

Below: Arriving at George Prior's shipyard, Great Yarmouth on 21st December 1999.
