Black, White, and in Color Sasha Torres,2018-06-05 This book examines the representation of blackness on television at the height of the southern civil rights movement and again in the aftermath of the Reagan Bush years In the process it looks carefully at how television s ideological projects with respect to race have supported or conflicted with the industry s incentive to maximize profits or consolidate power Sasha Torres examines the complex relations between the television industry and the civil rights movement as a knot of overlapping interests She argues that television coverage of the civil rights movement during 1955-1965 encouraged viewers to identify with black protestors and against white police including such infamous villains as Birmingham's Bull Connor and Selma's Jim Clark Torres then argues that television of the 1990s encouraged viewers to identify with police against putatively criminal blacks even in its dramatizations of police brutality Torres's pioneering analysis makes distinctive contributions to its fields It challenges television scholars to consider the historical centrality of race to the constitution of the medium's genres visual conventions and industrial structures And it displaces the analytical focus on stereotypes that has hamstrung assessments of television's depiction of African Americans concentrating instead on the ways in which African Americans and their political collectives have actively shaped that depiction to advance civil rights causes This book also challenges African American studies to pay closer and better attention to television's ongoing role in the organization and disorganization of U S racial politics Black White and Gray David Bultman, 2012-01-01

Life every day presents us with its quintessential hurdles Sometimes we take the white route other times we take the black route but most of the time the route is neither white nor black but is grey A black for one may be white for the other who's to judge but the mixture of the two colours is definitely grey This collection of eleven short stories basically revolves around emotions and actions we tend to feel and take to overcome the trials of life The betrayal of a friend the greed of an employee the disgust of an old man the possessiveness of a mother in law the insecurity of a woman the love of a mother the jealousy of a sibling the rashness of the young the anxiety of a groom the hope of a beggar or even the despair of a lake are all but natural emotions be it Black White and Grey Film Study Materials British Film Institute.
