

Where Is the Boreal Forest?

The boreal forest is our planet's largest land-based biome. Also called taiga, the forest stretches in northern regions, forming a vast carpet the width of the world. Only 6 percent of the forest is in Russia. Twenty-nine percent is in Canada. Other cool northern areas, like Alaska and Scandinavia, also have boreal forests.

There are many types of habitats in the forest. Some habitats provide homes for a diversity of species. There are birds in the trees and mammals in the bushes. There are fish and frogs in the rivers and the lakes. Some species stay all year. Others only visit.

Parts of the forest are so remote, the humans have never seen them. But the boreal forest affects everyone. Its trees clean our air, and its wetlands clean our water. The forest also slows global climate change. It is a vast — and vital — wilderness.

A Watery Wood

There's more fresh water in the boreal forest than anywhere else on Earth — with more than 60 percent of Canada's lakes in Canada alone.
