Over, 2018-02-04 Excerpt from Birds of South Dakota There is perhaps no State in the Union where bird study is more perplexing than in South Dakota From east to west the State embraces birds of woods prairie and mountains The range of many birds is constantly moving westward and this causes variation in the migrating routes of many species The Black Hills lying only a little apart from the Rocky Mountains are apt to be visited occasionally by western species From south to north likewise both trees and latitude affect the bird problem The Missouri River with its wooded banks and ravines traversing the middle of the State provides conditions which attract some species farther north than they would otherwise come But for this fact we probably would not have the beautiful Western Blue Grosbeak within our borders Birds from farther east and south also such as Cardinals and Wood Thrushes follow the growing trees into South Dakota Many birds are found in the southern part of the State which are never seen in the northern part and some birds which formerly nested in South Dakota no longer do so So numerous therefore are the changes going on in bird life within the State that observations which were made a few years ago may not be accurate today and observations made today may not be accurate tomorrow About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works The Birds ten species there is a complete mating system spectrum from seasonally monogamous pair bonding to highly promiscuous mating patterns. The latter group illustrates the strong structural and behavioral effects of sexual selection resulting from nonmonogamous mating. These influences reach a peak in the development by some grouse species of engaging in mating leks arena like competitions performed by males while attempting to attract fertile females and also provide opportunities for females to select optimum mating partners. These sexual competitions also promote strong differences evolving in sexual signaling behaviors displays among closely related species. Nevertheless a relatively high incidence of mating errors and resulting hybridization often occurs in spite of these marked behavioral differences. In addition to a text of 101 000 words the book includes 16 range maps 37 line drawings and 38 photographs by the author as well as nearly 1 400 literature citations.
