Restoring North America's Birds Robert A. Askins, 2008-10-01 DIV The decline of bird species in a wide range of North American habitats forests prairies shrublands mountain regions marshes and deserts has inspired two decades of intense scientific study of bird ecology and conservation But for professional scientists and amateur birders alike interpreting the results of these diverse studies is often complex and bewildering This accessible book pulls together recent research on bird species and habitats to show how basic ecological principles apply in seemingly different situations Robert A Askins provides an engaging introduction to bird ecology and concepts of landscape ecology focusing on such intriguing species as Bachman's Warbler Red Crossbill Mountain Plover and Marbled Murrelet Understanding the ancient landscapes of North America and how humans have changed them Askins says is essential for devising plans to protect and restore bird populations In addition to such obvious changes to the landscape as the clearing of forests and plowing of prairies more subtle changes also dramatically affect birds Species may disappear when we interrupt natural disturbances by suppressing wildfires or trapping out beaver or when we disrupt habitat with roads and housing developments Askins challenges some of the assumptions that underlie current conservation efforts and offers concrete recommendations based on sound ecological principles for protecting the rich natural diversity of North America's birds div

Where Have All the Birds Gone? John Terborgh, 2020-10-06 Things are going wrong with our environment writes John Terborgh even the parts of it that are nominally protected If we wait until all the answers are in we may find ourselves in a much worse predicament than if we had taken notice of the problem earlier By waiting one risks being too late on the other hand there can be no such thing as being too early Terborgh's warnings are essential reading for all who care about migratory birds and our natural environment Why are tropical migrant species disappearing from our forests Can we save the birds that are left Terborgh takes a more comprehensive view of migratory birds than is usual by asking how they spend their lives during the half year they reside in the tropics By scrutinizing ill planned urban and suburban development in the United States and the tropical deforestation of Central and South America he summarizes our knowledge of the subtle combination of circumstances that is devastating our bird populations This work is pervaded by Terborgh's love for the thrushes warblers vireos cuckoos flycatchers and tanagers that inhabited his family's woodland acreage while he was growing up birds that no longer live there in spite of the preservation of those same woods as part of a county park The book is a tour of topics as varied as ecological monitoring the plight of the Chesapeake wetlands the survival struggle of Central American subsistence farmers and the management of commercial forests Forest Conservation in the East Usambara Mountains, Tanzania IUCN Tropical Forest Programme, 1989
