Excerpt from Black Bartlemy's Treasure. The Frenchman beside me had been dead since dawn. His scarred and shackled body swayed limply back and forth with every sweep of the great oar, as we, his less fortunate bench fellows, tugged and strained to keep time to the stroke. Two men had I seen die beside me, yet Death ever passed me by; nay, it seemed rather that despite the pain of stripes, despite the travail and hardship, my strength waxed the mightier upon arm and thigh, burnt nigh black by fierce suns, the muscles showed hard and knotted within my body scarred by the lash the life leapt and glowed yet was the soul of me sick unto death But it seemed I could not die finding thereby blessed rest and a surcease from this agony of life as had this Frenchman who of all the naked wretches about me was the only one with whom I had any sort of fellowship He had died as I say with the dawn so quietly that at first I thought he but fainted and pitied him but when I knew pity changed to bitterness Therefore as I strove at the heavy oar I prayed twixt gnashing teeth a prayer I had often prayed and the matter of my praying was thus Oh God of Justice for the agony I needs must now endure for the bloody stripes and bitter anguish give to me vengeance vengeance O God on mine enemy About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works Black Bartlemys Treasure Jeffery Farnol,2016-03-20 Jeffery Farnol 10
