response of colleges and universities in the United States to the need of graduate students to become equipped to make personal and public policy decisions as citizens of an international society Curriculum changes are showing a tightening of foreign language standards in schools of higher education and throughout the curriculum faculty are including material from other countries and advances in computer and satellite communication to enhance the international experience without leaving the classroom Additionally the international focus on higher education has been boosted through a major U S initiative that tripled federal spending on undergraduate study abroad The United States is also cooperating with foreign representatives in working with the Economic Community and the United Nations Educational Scientific and Cultural Organization to standardize educational credential reporting licensing and certification Governments are also looking with increased regulatory fervor upon joint educational business ventures Steps that faculty and administrators can take to improve international education on their campuses are explored including widening the curriculum to expose students to other cultures widening opportunities for international contact and evaluating organizational structures that help or hinder international activities Contains approximately 200 references and an index GLR      Budgeting for Higher Education at the State Level Daniel T. Layzell, Jan W. Lyddon, 1990-05-12 State budgeting for higher education is a complex multifaceted process which is influenced by conditions outside both state government and higher education including the historical traditions political culture economic and demographic aspects of a state Noted is the need of higher education to compete with other policy areas for resources and yet retain its autonomous nature This monograph addresses the following budgeting concerns environmental factors framing the state budget process for higher education how these factors affect state budgeting the primary elements of the state budget process for higher education how the state higher education budget links resources with state objectives accountability costs productivity and quality affordability economic development minority and nontraditional students independent higher education and the implications of what we know about state level budgeting for higher education It is emphasized that all participants from the state level agency to the department within an institution should be aware of the overall picture of state budgeting for higher education Includes 190 references LPT
