Houses without Names Thomas C. Hubka,2025-09-02 In countless neighborhoods across America the streets are lined with houses representing no established architectural style Many of the 80 million homes in the United States today have only loose fitting general names like ranch duplex bungalow and flat Most however cannot even be identified by these common names much less by an architectural type such as Colonial Italianate or Queen Anne The few regionally recognized vernacular terms shotgun Cape Cod three decker and the like remain exceptions rather than the rule In this innovative copiously illustrated guide Thomas C Hubka considers why most ordinary working class houses lack an adequate identifying nomenclature and proposes new ways to name and classify these anonymous structures shedding a fresh light on their role in the development of American domestic culture and its housing landscape Popular developer built tract speculative everyday whatever they are called these common homes constitute the largest portion of American housing in all regions and historic periods Without classification these dwellings tend to be left out of histories of American building neglected in preservation surveys and plans and ignored when it comes to considering their impact on American culture Current methods of interpreting common houses need not be replaced Hubka shows but only modified to include a broader more complete spectrum of common dwellings As Hubka explains by applying an order of census and a floor plan analysis scholars can adequately characterize the actual homes in which most Americans live particularly in recent times after the widespread growth of suburban homes Based on

years of field observations measured drawings and surveys of regional house types this handbook provides a working vocabulary for the study and appreciation of America's common houses and will prove useful to preservationists academics and architects as well as owners and residents of America's most ubiquitous residences House documents, 1884

A Social History of Housing 1815-1985 John Burnett, 2025-11-18 Originally published in 1986 for the second edition of this standard text previously only covering up to 1970 in A Social History of Housing 1815-1985 John Burnett has extended his study to take account of the next fifteen years It remains a comprehensive and important survey covering over a century and a half of developments in housing conditions both urban and rural public and private and tracing the evolution of mass housing through by law terraces back to backs and the tower block to the low rise high density estates of the 1980s

The CIPP Evaluation Model Daniel L. Stufflebeam, Guili Zhang, 2017-03-07 The book's chapters provide background on how and why the CIPP Context Input Process Product Model was developed a detailed presentation of the model an explanation of the key role of an evaluation oriented leader who can decide what and when to evaluate detailed presentations on evaluation design budgeting and contracting procedures and tools for collecting analyzing and reporting evaluation information and procedures for conducting standards based meta evaluations evaluations of evaluations These topics are interspersed with illustrative evaluation cases in such areas as education housing and military personnel evaluation Current Construction Reports, 1996

Mass Appraisal Methods Tom Kauko, Maurizio d'Amato, 2009-01-28 This book takes a cross disciplinary and cross cultural look at mass appraisal expertise for property valuation in different market conditions and offers some cutting edge approaches The editors establish an international platform and present the scientific debate as well as practical feasibility considerations Heretic and orthodox valuation methods are assessed based on specific criteria partly technical and partly institutional Methodological evaluation is approached using two types of criteria operational concerns about how to determine property value differentials between spatial and functional units of real estate in a valid and reliable way technical criteria and the kind of market circumstances being operated in institutional criteria While technical criteria are relatively well researched there is little theoretically informed work on the connection between country context and selection of property appraisal methods The book starts with an examination of current mass property appraisal practices presenting case studies from widely differing markets from the American and Dutch where regression based methods have been used successfully for some time to the Eastern European and other emerging economies where limitations have to be compensated by focusing on the modelling assumptions The second part of the book looks at sophisticated modelling approaches some of which represent combinations of elements from two or more techniques Whatever the exact modelling approach the requirements are always high for the quality of the data and suitability of the method In the final section methods are evaluated and compared according to technical criteria and against institutional contexts With its exceptionally wide coverage of valuation issues Mass Appraisal Methods an international perspective for property valuers addresses property valuation problems common to different countries and approaches applicable in both developed and emerging economies
