School of English Literature, Language and Linguistics,2012 The diverse and potentially highly nuanced topographical vocabulary used in English place names constitutes a fruitful area of research within the fields of semantics and lexicology as well as onomastics It has been observed in previous studies Gelling 1984 Gelling and Cole 2000 that topographical terms are used in major settlement names of Old English OE origin consistently of landscape features of a particular type often with highly specialised meanings for instance OE d n of a flat topped hill and OE h h of a heel shaped one This observation which has been termed the Gelling hypothesis is today regarded as valid for most if not all parts of England In this thesis I investigate the meanings and uses of hill terms that is place name elements referring to hill features in the place names of Northumberland and County Durham with special reference to previous work by Gelling and Cole I argue that the Gelling hypothesis is valid in general in the study area but also that the relationship between the topographical terms and the landscape features to which they refer is often not as straightforward as the hypothesis predicts I extend the investigation to names of Middle English and Modern English origin identifying specialised uses which suggest that the contrast in precision between the OE and later hill terms is not as stark as the hypothesis seems to predict I also examine the collocations of the commonest hill terms finding typical collocates and collocation patterns This thesis is based on an electronic corpus containing all relevant names found on current OS Landranger 1 50 000 maps the total number of names in the corpus is 2 227 The discussion of the meanings of the hill terms is based on a detailed analysis of a representative sample of topographical sites through map work and field work based on the methodological frameworks developed by Gelling and Cole with the introduction of consistent and clearly defined terminology which allows for more objective analysis

Work on them has taken much the greater part of eight years sadly interrupted by the war and other circumstances These interruptions have had their bad influence in making it more difficult than usual to secure that uniformity of handling and presentation which is desirable in a theme of this kind On the other hand they have enabled the author to take advantage of the ever growing literature English and Scandinavian that deals with these matters As one reads it the unhappy conviction is more and more brought home to one that no single county can be dealt with satisfactorily apart from a survey of the field of English place nomenclature as a whole In the disorganised condition of English place name study it is impossible to look for those happy results that have already been attained in Norway and are fast becoming possible in Sweden and Denmark as the result of organised research aided by the State Those who recognise the importance of these studies must labour to secure similar co operation in England and in the meantime endeavour to keep interest alive by such single handed efforts as they can individually make About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
