Art of Angling William Blacker,1842 The Art of Angling Thomas Tod Stoddart,2015-06-15 Excerpt from The Art of Angling As Practised in Scotland The very limited number if not total want of dissertations upon the subject of Angling in Scotland and the necessity for having something like an index to our lochs and streams have induced us to throw together the following chapters In character and produce our waters differ very essentially from those of England we have clear and rapid rivers torrents black with mosses or pellucid as diamond lakes large and gleaming tarns deep still and terrible and of these some are stored with prime subtle trout and others are frequented by the active salmon the monarch of the flood On the other hand the English waters are generally flat and muddy affording few fish except those which delight in dead calm places such as pike carp roach bream and perch The trout they may happen to contain are also very unlike those in Scotland becoming large and lazy dainty in their tastes and capricious as to their feeding hours Accordingly a very different and more ingeniously varied method of capturing them is employed by the southern angler from that practised by us The fancy is excercised to compound tackles and artifices which appear altogether superfluous to the eyes of Scotsmen Insects also are constructed which however closely they resemble nature are seldom if ever preferred by our countrymen to their own simple undazzling materials About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
